Long Nightmare Now Over: Ford

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Gerald Ford became the 38th president of the United States today, saying "our long national nightmare" is over and asking the nation to "let brotherly love come to our country."

Ford took the oath of office from Chief Justice Warren Burger and then in a brief, simple televised address from the East Room of the White House said he was "acutely aware" of his status as the first Chief Executive of the U.S. never to have been elected on a national ballot.

As president, he pledged, he would be what he had always been — a plain-spoken politician.

He was surrounded by old friends in Congress, where he has often said he had many adversaries but no enemies.

"My fellow Americans," Ford said in reference to the scandal that caused Richard Nixon to become the first president to renounce his office, "our long national nightmare is over. Our Constitution works."

"Our great Republic is a government of laws and not of men. Here the people rule."

"But there is a higher power, by whatever name we honor Him, who ordains not only righteousness but love, not only justice but mercy."

"As we bind up the internal wounds of Watergate, more painful and more poisonous than those of foreign wars, let us restore the golden rule to our political process, and let brotherly love purge our hearts of suspicion and hate."

Ford said he was delivering "just a little straight talk among friends, and I intend it to be the first of many."

"I am acutely aware that you have not elected me your president by your ballots. So I ask that you confirm me as your president by your prayers."

"You have not chosen me by secret ballot, neither have I gained office through secret promises."

"I have not sought this enormous responsibility, but I will not shirk it."

Signs of controversy, meanwhile, have already appeared over the choice of Ford's future vice-president, even as republicans predicted their party would benefit in November from the expected "honeymoon" with the new president.

A group of conservatives in both Houses of Congress, led by Sen. Jesse Helms (Rep.-N.C.), launched a public drive to block the selection of former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller to the No. 2 position.

The name that headed their list of acceptable alternatives to Rockefeller, who was proposed for the job two days ago by Ford associate Melvin Laird, was that of Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Goldwater, who bested Rockefeller in the bitter 1964 Republican presidential nomination, told newsmen in Phoenix earlier in the week that "no man could say no" to an invitation from Ford.

Nixon and his wife walked on a red carpet from the White House to a waiting helicopter and began their journey to the California home that is the western White House no more.

One last time, as he stepped into the helicopter, the resigning president waved the two-handed V for victory sign he had flashed so many times before from hundreds of political platforms.

His successor, Gerald Ford, watched the takeoff.

Nixon's Tearful Goodbye

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Spinning out the last act of a shattered presidency, Richard Nixon bid a tearful, choking adieu to the men and women of his administration today before flying off to his San Clemente home in California, a private citizen.

At times his voice cracked as he made his last White House speech, urging those who remained behind to do their best and assuring them that only when a man has hit the deepest valley can he realize "how magnificent it is to be on the highest mountain."

Tears streaming down his face, he said "now we look to the future."

With the president, as he received more than five minutes of applause, were Mrs. Nixon, his daughters Julie and Tricia and their husbands.

The chieftains of his shattered administration were there, too: State Secretary Henry Kissinger, Defence Secretary James Schlesinger, his Watergate lawyer James St. Clair.

Price Zoom on Fruit, Vegetables in Cans

Higher production costs will force the price of processed fruits up 35 per cent and processed vegetables up 20 per cent when the new crop reaches supermarkets and department stores in November from the expected "honeymoon" with the new president.

A group of conservatives in both Houses of Congress, led by Sen. Jesse Helms (Rep.-N.C.), launched a public drive to block the selection of former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller to the No. 2 position.

Canned peaches, strawberries, pears and cherries will be up at least 35 per cent. Prunes, with a lower syrup content, will be up about 30 per cent.

Canned vegetables will be up 15 to 20 per cent for most products. Pork and bean price increases should only be about 10 per cent, lowest jump on the list, because of relatively high prices for the previous crop.

The price escalation is due to a number of factors, mainly higher prices to farmers, higher wages and a sharp jump in sugar prices.

Tin plate for cans is up 10 per cent and carton prices have also been increased.

"While the price of sugar is high, it is certainly not the major factor in the price increases for this year," Deacon said.

Deacon said the higher cost of sugar would put upward pressure on the price of all products using syrup.

However, he said the main reason for price increases is the sharply higher cost of buying products from farms.

As examples, he said, canneries have to pay 20 per cent more for cherries and the price for pears has gone to $210 a ton from $175.

"These are large price increases and part of a rather frightening trend. It appears we are in for a round of large price increases every year," Deacon said.

"The farmer is entitled to a fair price but these increases give the appearance of getting out of hand."

Labor costs are up 17 per cent from a year ago, another factor in production expenses.

Tin plate for cans is up 10 per cent and carton prices have also been increased.

Deacon said it would be at least four weeks before tins of this year's harvest have been processed and shipped from his Haney cannery to supermarkets in Vancouver and Victoria. Current stocks on food shelves represent the previous harvest year or imminent.

Gillis is also charged with the murders of Robin Gates, 15, of Port Coquitlam, early last month, and of Barbara Joan Statt, 17, of Burnaby, in July 1973.

Both lower mainland girls had been killed with rocks after having been sexually assaulted. They had both been hitchhiking when they were picked up by their killer.

Their deaths, and five others in the province since 1969, have been the subject of an intensive RCMP investigation in recent months.

Chief Superintendent Marvin Marcus said Gillis is not a suspect in the other killings.

"It now appears two or three other separate people are involved in the remaining unsolved slayings."

"It is frightening to think there are 500 suspects not only in B.C. but in the lower mainland of B.C. who could fit the bill."

"We can now concentrate on the remaining cases," he said.

Staff Sgt. Fred Bodnaruk of North Vancouver, head of the special investigating team, and Cpl. Ray Egremont left Wednesday for Milland to interview the accused.

Gillis, described by Marcus as a large man, 6'4", 225 lbs. and a native of Ontario, apparently lived in the lower mainland for at least two years working as a beer bouncer before he came to Victoria.

"There has been no discussion with citizens yet," Tremayne added.

NO GUARANTEE OF IMMUNITY GIVEN NIXON

Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon leaves office without immunity from prosecution, leaving him vulnerable to a host of criminal charges ranging the breadth of scandal that has emerged in the two years since the Watergate break-in.

The lead role in bringing an indictment against Nixon after he leaves office would fall to special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who said Thursday night there has been no deal sparing Nixon from prosecution in exchange for his resignation.

Congress might pass a resolution urging that no charges be brought against Nixon.

Such a resolution is not binding by law; it only expresses the feelings of members of Congress.

Nixon's resignation may have squelched what little support there was for such a resolution.

It's chief sponsor, Senator Edward Brooke, (R., Mass.) said Thursday night he would withdraw the resolution unless Nixon makes a "full confession" of his involvement in Watergate and related scandals.

After Nixon made his speech, Brooke said that Nixon acknowledged "errors of judgment but didn't state what the errors in judgement are."

Congress, however, is expected to leave to President Ford, the question of whether Nixon will be spared the possibility of prosecution.

The impeachment effort is expected to die now that Nixon has relinquished office voluntarily.

Speaker Carl Albert said after Nixon spoke that impeachment proceedings "will come to a halt."

Earlier this year, however, Jaworski convinced a grand jury that an incumbent president could not be named a defendant in a criminal action.

As a result, the grand jury named Nixon an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up conspiracy. That no longer holds true. Seven of Nixon's ex-associates were named defendants in the same case.

Ford could seek to prevail upon Jaworski not to bring charges against Nixon on the ground Nixon had paid a severe enough penalty in becoming the first Chief Executive forced to resign.

Ford, as president, could block the trial of his predecessor. He has the authority to grant Nixon a full pardon for all crimes in advance, even in the absence of formal charges and conviction.

Connally Pleads Not Guilty

Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Former U.S. treasury secretary John Connally pleaded not guilty today to all charges rising out of an allegation he accepted a $10,000 bribe after a controversial 1971 milk price support increase.

If there is any doubt, I plead not guilty to all cojnts," Connally said in a firm voice after one of the prosecutors at his arraignment asked whether he had yet entered a plea.

District Judge George Hart granted a request by Connally's lawyer for four to five days to file motions.

Hart also released Connally in the custody of his lawyer,

Edward Williams, and gave him unlimited travel rights.

Connally was indicted last week and charged with taking two $5,000 payments from the biggest dairy co-operative in the U.S., Associated Milk Producers, Inc., in return for his help in getting President Nixon to raise federal milk price supports in March, 1971.

Connally's one-time friend, Texas lawyer Jake Jacobsen, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of bribery and told the judge he had given Connally the two $5,000 payments.

The former general manager of the milk producers, Harold Nelson, has admitted in court that he authorized the $10,000 payment to Connally.

Former co-op lobbyist Bob Lilly has testified that he gave the money to Jacobsen to pass on to Connally.

Connally tapped his fingers nervously on the table before the brief arraignment began. Afterwards, he walked briskly out of the courtroom hand-in-hand with his wife.

Private Papers Alone Worth Over $3M

TIM O'BRIAN
and BRADLEY GRAHAM

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Richard M. Nixon leaves the highest office in the U.S. with bright financial future virtually guaranteed by his personal ownership of rooms full of presidential documents that will someday be worth millions of dollars.

While saddled at the moment with huge bills for back taxes and mortgages, and while his savings were depleted by recent tax and mortgage payments, Nixon's presidential and pre-presidential papers will have great value should he decide to sell them.

In addition, Nixon will get a series of benefits he would have lost had he been impeached and convicted. He will receive:

— A $60,000 annual lifetime presidential pension.

— Up to $96,000 a year in government allowances for staff assistance.

— Free office space.

His wife, should she survive him, would get a $20,000-a-year pension.

On top of these special benefits, Nixon might be eligible for about $18,000 in civil service retirement benefits as a result of his service in the House, Senate, and vice-presidency.

The retirement benefits are contingent on his having participated over the years in the optional program.

A Civil Service Commission spokesman said Thursday he was not allowed to comment on Nixon's eligibility for these benefits.

The president would also be entitled to Secret Service protection for as long as he wants it, free mailing privileges for non-political mail and any Social Security benefits he might have earned while in private law practice.

The great bulk of his financial assets, however, clearly lies in boxes of documents temporarily stored at the National Archives in Washington.

According to a recent report of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, the presidential papers apparently belong to Mr. Nixon personally:

"Since the time of George Washington, it has been customary for presidents to treat their papers as their own personal property. The historical precedents, taken together with the provisions set forth in the Presidential Libraries Act, suggest that the papers of President Nixon are considered his personal property rather than public property," the report said.

While their value has not been calculated, those papers are probably worth $3 million.

The value of the Nixon archives will be enhanced considerably — perhaps by another $2 million — by the presidential tapes that Nixon could justifiably claim as his own, according to legal and tax officials. Even the subpoenaed Watergate-related recordings apparently belong to him.

"This talk of Nixon going out a pauper is crazy," said a Joint Taxation Committee staffer. "He's a millionaire."

In addition to his presidential papers, Nixon still controls about three

Ford: Simple, Homespun Man

By ISRAEL SHENKER
New York Times

He has a granite jaw, regular features, and a demeanor that remains stern even in laughter. It is a model countenance for billboards and campaign literature. He believes in the homespun virtues of family loyalty, hard work and stubborn patriotism. No intellectual, he likes to think of himself as a devotee of sensible courses and determination rather than originality and flair. He has admirers but no worshipful followers, critics but no real enemies.

About Gerald Rudolph Ford there is no aura of charisma. But those who have known him well over the years — in his undergraduate glory days on the gridiron in Michigan, in 25 years in the House of Representatives and in his brief tenure as vice president — say he is just what the nation needs: A solid man, a leader to be trusted.

Determination

When Nixon chose him in October as vice-president designate, to succeed Spiro T. Agnew who had resigned in disgrace, Ford said he felt "something like awe and astonishment at the magnitude of the new responsibilities I have been asked to assume," adding: "At the same time I have a new and invigorating sense of determination and purpose to do my best to meet them."

Ford actually became vice-president on Dec. 6, and had, until Monday when Nixon released further damaging evidence against himself, travelled hundreds of thousands of miles, attempting to rally the faithful and, at the same time, establish his own positions.

"I think a vice president ought to speak his own mind," he said.

At one point Nixon told him he was working too hard and suggested he curtail his schedule. Ford said he would not take Nixon's advice.

"I would get very bored if I sat around and didn't get out to see the people," he said.

Six years ago, when there was talk about Jerry Ford as favorite-son candidate for the vice-presidency, he said, "I would 10 times rather be Speaker of the House than vice-president." But Congress has a way of remaining Democratic, and Ford's hopes of becoming Speaker glimmered only faintly:

Name Changed

Ford's original name was Leslie King Jr. He was born July 14, 1913, and when he was two years old his mother divorced his father and left Omaha, Neb., for Grand Rapids, Mich. When she remarried, her husband, Gerald Ford Sr., president of the Ford Paint and Varnish company, adopted the boy and gave him his name.

Gerald Ford Jr. was one of four sons, and at high school he took a double lunch hour and earned spending money waiting on tables and washing dishes in a Greek restaurant.

What interested him most was football. He made the high school all-city and all-state football teams, and moved on to linebacker and centre at the University of Michigan. He was graduated in 1933.

Turning down offers from the Green Bay Packers and the Detroit Lions, he attended Yale Law School during alternate semesters, spending the rest of the year as assistant football coach and freshman boxing coach.

After graduation from law school in 1941, Ford began practicing law in Grand Rapids. Nine months later he enlisted in the navy as an ensign, serving 17 months and ending up a lieutenant-commander.

On his return to Grand Rapids he resumed his law practice. Ford was encouraged by Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, himself a Grand Rapids man who had made a name for himself as an internationalist, and he entered politics.

Michigan's fifth congressional district was safely Republican, rural as well as urban, and its citizens were almost 100 per cent white and mostly Dutch descent. Bartel Jonkman, the district's congressman, was an isolationist veteran, and Ford set out to beat him.

The neophyte won an upset victory, then paused long enough in October, to marry Elizabeth Bloomer, who was born in Chicago but had lived most of her life in Grand Rapids.

From age 14 she had earned spending money and then her living by modelling clothes. She had spent two years in New York City as a dancer in Martha Graham's company, modelling meanwhile to keep herself alive. Then she returned to Grand Rapids and became what she called "a fashion co-ordinator" with a local department store.

In 1942 she married William Warren, a local furniture salesman, and in 1947 the marriage ended in divorce for incompatibility.

From the moment he entered Congress in 1949, Ford's views on most questions have been conservative. A self-described internationalist, he was an outspoken hawk on Vietnam.

He has voted against virtually all social welfare legislation, has voted to weaken minimum wage bills, has strongly opposed forced busing, and while supporting key civil rights bills on final passage, has been severely criticized by civil rights backers for efforts to soften the legislation through amendments.

"I think a vice president ought to speak his own mind," he said.

At one point Nixon told him he was working too hard and suggested he curtail his schedule. Ford said he would not take Nixon's advice.

"I would get very bored if I sat around and didn't get out to see the people," he said.

Six years ago, when there was talk about Jerry Ford as favorite-son candidate for the vice-presidency, he said, "I would 10 times rather be Speaker of the House than vice-president." But Congress has a way of remaining Democratic, and Ford's hopes of becoming Speaker glimmered only faintly:

One Concern

It was the first move in an attempt to rejuvenate the GOP image, which many thought suffered by contrast to the youthful Kennedy administration. This was the time of the Ev and Charlie show on TV, during which two rather senior Republicans, Sen. Everett Dirksen ad Rep. Charles Halleck, served as the party's spokesmen.

Ford fought carefully, doing his best not to make enemies out of opponents, and he won popularity among his fellow representatives. For years the young Republicans in the House had tried to win a voice in the party's congressional leadership, and in January, 1963, Ford took over as third-ranking Republican — chairman of the party's caucus in the House.

Ford said his one concern about becoming vice president was that "my friends might stop calling me Jerry." To make sure that his friends would look kindly on his appointment, he was ready to provide all the documentation demanded, including a statement of net worth indicating that as of Sept. 30, 1973, Mr. and Mrs. Ford were worth $256,378, including $162,000 in real estate — the Alexandria home, a vacation condominium in Vail, Colo., a rental dwelling in Grand Rapids, and a one-quarter interest in a cabin in Michigan.

In addition to his minority leaders salary of $49,500, Ford made $20,000 annually from appearances and speeches around the country, with fees ranging from $300 to $2,000.

His Alexandria home does not suggest the life style of a wealthy man. Its principal object d'art is a color photograph of the Fords and the Nixons, taken on the evening Ford was named vice president.

The Chapter Ends

As the climax of the great personal and national drama that has engaged the full attention of the United States for the past many months, Mr. Nixon's speech yesterday evening was a pedestrian effort. Clearly, Mr. Nixon was speaking to the history books rather than to his nation. When the flow of time has dimmed the Watergate imbroglio to the stature of a petty political controversy the details of which will be little noted by the public, Mr. Nixon seems to have been thinking, my historic address of resignation will be all that emerges. Therefore I will adorn it with noble statements, moral generalities, words of comfort and high advice to the nation, and a generous commendation to God's grace.

Properly composed for so dramatic an occasion, the speech could have come out as Mr. Nixon wished, and posterity might have wondered what drove such a great and splendid man to sacrifice himself so nobly for his country. Unfortunately, it did not come across that way. The whole effort suggested that the president's second-string writing team had labored all night on the job, producing a ragtag of paragraphs in the exhausted hours of Thursday's dawn. The irony of Mr. Nixon's leave-taking, therefore, is that his uninspired 15-minute insertion in the book of history is more likely to be skipped than read. It may be said that the real Nixon came through — and there was nothing much there.

The nearest Mr. Nixon came to apologizing for the incredible mess into which his nation has been thrown was when he conceded that of the many judgments he has made there were some wrong ones. That appeared to be as far as he would go toward sorrow, remorse or contrition. He did say he was very reluctant to be leaving the White House — an understandable sentiment — because now he would be unable to serve the people as widely as he would like. But through all his fine broadcast words, the sordid language and plottings of the notorious tapes intruded a whispered background. The shadow and the echo were more tangible than the man and his speech.

There is one hope, however, which Mr. Nixon may reasonably entertain. The history books — however they may perpetuate the first United States president ever to resign — will have to record his achievements in foreign policy: the breakthrough to China, the detente with Russia, the return of American troops from Vietnam, the promising approach to the Middle East, the hard progress in disarmament agreements, among them. Regardless of how much Mr. Kissinger contributed to these events, the fact is that they occurred under Mr. Nixon's regime and by his personal direction. Perhaps posterity, in remembering what he did for international affairs, will be able to overlook what he did to himself.

There is tragedy of heroic proportions in this man and his fate; his story of human ambition and human shortcoming is in the classic Greek genre. But the world may not look so deeply. It may see only the irony of a man who sought protection and revenge against his friends and enemies by bugging them, but contrived his own disaster by inadvertently bugging himself.

Rescue Mission

Alderman Sam Bawlf's latest rehabilitation venture is an imaginative plan which should do much to recreate a large section of the Old Town area of the city centre.

The buildings fronting on Johnson, Storie and Cormorant streets present a formidable challenge to any developer, and the centre area of the block to the rear of the old structures will take a good deal of capital and inspired restoration if it is to become an attractive market square surrounded by shops and eating places. But the plan is possible and if brought to fruition the city will have gained an enviable asset in a district where it can do the most good.

Victoria has long lacked a market place for local produce and, adequately prepared, such a facility could bring week-long life to the area. Part of the interest of Mr. Bawlf's project lies in the encouragement it should give to other plans for rejuvenation of the — in many cases — decrepit premises lining some of the below-Government streets.

The Old Town concept calls for commercial properties as well as open spaces and residential accommodation.

Mr. Bawlf's plan, as briefly sketched at this point, appears to be well in line with the general program. It could be a significant breakthrough in modern development of the once-busy, long dormant area.

Imaginative Cabinet Changes

OTTAWA — No prime minister can be accused of an insignificant cabinet shuffle when men as senior as C. M. Drury and Mitchell Sharp leave prestige portfolios and several of the government's less impressive members are dropped from office altogether.

Several of the changes are genuinely imaginative. One to ponder thoughtfully is the prime minister's action in turning the department of public works as well as science and technology over to Drury. Public works is always one of the murkiest areas of government, operating under the cloud of its reputation as a patronage department, the place through which a certain sort of campaign contribution is rewarded.

Drury has had two main strengths during his period as a powerful and senior minister. A man of substantial means, he is not a careerist and he enjoys a reputation for great personal integrity. It is difficult to imagine him crowning a distinguished career by presiding over dubious patronage operations.

Critical Area

Intentionally or otherwise, the prime minister has introduced an interesting element into a critical area. The fact that the Election Expenses Act has now come into effect eliminates any justification that may once have existed for some of the traditional fund-raising activities of the Liberal and Conservative parties. It has been a matter of intense interest to see what sort of relationship would develop now between the Liberals, their contributors and bagmen on one side and the works department on the other. Old habits die hard and mere acts of Parliament do not always affect them.

Whatever his intention may have been, the prime minister has presented the former president of Treasury Board as an interesting and sensitive challenge as any that exists in politics at the moment.

Mitchell Sharp's new post, government leader in the House of Commons, is as important as the one he is leaving although it may not carry quite as much prestige. But a man who has had Sharp's career can afford to concern himself with the value of the work to be done and forget some of the questions of ranking that inevitably pre-occupy men still on their way up.

He has already been minister of trade and minister of finance as well as the country's foreign minister for a long run. He possesses firmness and tact, the two qualities needed in the post of government House leader, that trying spot whose incumbent plays so large a role in determining whether the day-to-day business of the House of Commons goes with reasonable smoothness, or is a source of steady friction and difficulty.

In giving Bryce Mackasey the postmaster general's portfolio, the prime minister has picked for the job the man with the best chance of clearing up the bad industrial relations that have plagued the mail service for years.

Even Mackasey's critics would not deny the genuine success he had as minister of labor, making a major contribution to the broad area of industrial relations in this country. If he can eliminate the bad relationships that plague the mail service he will be a hero. If Mackasey can't, probably no one else around can either. If that happens we probably should all view letters as a relic of the past. The whole country will fervently wish him well.

C. M. DRURY

... sensitive challenge

A bit of restructuring that may not be as obvious to the public as some of the rest involves the department of energy, mines and resources. Don MacDonald stays on as minister and probably deserves to in spite of the speed with which he can get into squabbles with provincial governments.

Although some people certainly find him abrasive, he is an able man, highly intelligent. Much of the battering he took in the House of Commons last year was

Interesting president

Jean Chretien should make an interesting president of Treasury Board. As the man charged with responsibility for improving the state of relations between this country and its Indian population, he spent years in a no-win situation. Politics had nothing to offer that so guaranteed a minister headaches without the possibility of fully resolving their cause.

He bore a lot of criticism, some of it fierce, but he won widespread respect and a good deal of admiration. Few men in the cabinet had quite as good a claim to a change of jobs. As president of Treasury Board at a time when fiscal restraint is going to be needed, Chretien obviously has still to be tested. You would not expect him, however, to be a push-over for every minister wanting to empty the treasury for his pet project.

In keeping John Turner at the finance ministry, the prime minister has avoided a change of direction there at a time when there is more than enough economic uncertainty facing the country, inside its borders and beyond them. It seems to me that this is one of his wisest decisions.

Cabinet changes do not change the world. The same problems go on. They are necessary, however, partly for the sake of freshness in portfolios, partly to prevent personal power from becoming too entrenched and partly to drop men who, although possibly able in other ways, prove not to be well cast as cabinet ministers.

Suspended Yes, Expelled No

QUEBEC — It was all very entertaining live drama unfolding before the half-closing eyes of the National Assembly press gallery.

Two English-speaking Liberal backbenchers — George Springate and John Ciaccia — had just been suspended by Premier Bourassa for voting against the party's official language act — Bill 22.

Emerging from the assembly, the premier slithered his way through the press corps toward the waiting television cameras. He was rehearsing his "severe look" to lend credibility to the stern dialogue he was about to deliver.

"Okay, we're rolling," signaled the cameraman.

"Mister Premier," asked a reporter, "have you officially suspended the two Liberal members who refused to toe the party line?"

"I can tell you that they will no longer be allowed to attend caucus meetings until caucus members and the party executive decide their future status. From that you can draw your own conclusions," replied Bourassa.

Inside Pressure?

Has there been pressure from within the caucus to have them expelled from the party?

"There have been no requests of that nature ... to date," the premier answered teasingly.

Will their case be decided at the next meeting of the Liberal caucus?

"Not necessarily. It could come up at some later meeting," replied the party leader.

When is the next meeting?

"Well I'm not quite sure. Probably not for a few weeks," concluded Bourassa, by now struggling to conceal what is known to press gallery reporters as the "Boo-Boo Smirk."

To have witnessed such a performance is to have gained some insight into the political games Bourassa loves to play ... and usually excels in.

Neither the premier nor members of the Liberal caucus (with possibly a few exceptions) are seriously thinking of throwing Springate and Ciaccia out of the Liberal family.

But when the two Montreal members voted against final approval of Bill 22 last week, (the official language bill), Bourassa's gambit was to make the most out of the situation by feeding the press with hints that expulsion was an unfortunate but inevitable thing.

"After all," said the premier, "their gesture cannot be considered frivolous."

Then where does Bourassa score points if he isn't serious about disowning his two black sheep? A review of the Bill 22 debate provides the answer.

When the official language act was presented in May, most of the English-speaking members heaped scorn on the bill for its alleged "repressive", "dictatorial", "undemocratic" and "anti-English" tone.

At the other end of the political spectrum, Rene Levesque's Parti Quebecois and nationalist groups throughout the province were accusing the Bourassa government of betraying French Quebecers for not going far enough in asserting the priority status of French.

Bourassa strategists were wooing the French-speaking majority with sales pitches such as: "If the English are so opposed to the bill, then it must be good for the French."

The same logic was applied in going after the "non-extremist" elements of the English-speaking population. When the criticism grew too loud, Bourassa amended the proposed legislation in an effort to appease both sides.

In practical terms, the "suspension" means very little at the moment.

Bourassa's decision came the day of the summer adjournment and no parliamentary committees are scheduled to sit until September. Both members will continue to draw their salaries.

They may miss out on the annual Liberal party golf tournament, an event which some members always try to avoid.

Expulsion?

"Not a chance. Everything will work itself out," said an influential member of the caucus.

If it came to expulsion, Ciaccia says he would resign his seat and force a by-election in his predominantly English-speaking riding. And the last thing Bourassa wants at the moment is a referendum on Bill 22 in an English riding.

During their present "suspension" period, Springate has gone out to spend the month of August in Vancouver while Ciaccia is continuing to work with Bourassa in trying to negotiate a settlement with the Indians in the James Bay area where a massive hydro electric project is already underway.

In my mind that is what it, the jamboree, is all about. The fun and frolic is merely the tip of the iceberg and will pass on as will these young people. As to whether the stream and lake will become and remain contaminated only time and health authorities will tell.

And let us not forget that the leaders, at least from the immediate area, are volunteers, unpaid and often maligned.

Jamboree Answer

On August 1 upwards of 3,000 scouts and leaders assembled at Camp Barnard to begin a 10-day jamboree. On August 2 Anna Louise Kirton, of Otter Point Rd., protested, via the Victoria Times, to these youngsters, as she says, "from all over the world," assembling and possibly polluting a water source of local citizens. She also takes a swipe at the cost to the ordinary working man or woman of sending a boy to camp.

I would like to reply and expand on her comments. Firstly, the cost. To each boy $60 plus equipment. My own 12-year-old boy, being a reasonable scout and following scouting ways, saved his money earned by delivering the Victoria Times.

I cannot dispute or comment on what boys will or will not do whilst in the lake, but I can say that when 3,000 young people assemble at a Scout Jamboree only goodwill can follow. Perhaps in this way, by meeting their peers, exchanging ideas and gifts, observing others as they practise their particular customs, coming to appreciate that it takes many individuals each and every one with something to contribute, to form a community, these young people of today will become the more mature grown-ups of tomorrow. Instead of being narrow-minded and possessive as many of today's citizens are, they will be open-minded and tolerant of others.

In my mind that is what it, the jamboree, is all about. The fun and frolic is merely the tip of the iceberg and will pass on as will these young people. As to whether the stream and lake will become and remain contaminated only time and health authorities will tell.

And let us not forget that the leaders, at least from the immediate area, are volunteers, unpaid and often maligned.

Three Strikes

In regard to the article on renting houses in Victoria; our house (rented) burned up in April and by June we still hadn't found a place. We had three strikes against us — dog, cat and chickens.

We ran an ad for three days and never even got a nibble. We are still living in a tent and if we can't find accommodation by October we would appreciate any helpful suggestions on how to insulate canvas — cause it's probably going to be a long, cold winter. Although I must say, cold-hearted as landlords are in Victoria, in regard to pets and children, I'm sure we could rent an igloo without fear of it melting. — "Chilled."

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of August 9, 1914

"In my opinion the great European war cannot last many months." This view was expressed this morning by A. F. Aristotle, a London businessman, who is in Victoria for a few days on tour of Canada. He adduced his reasons for his opinion as follows: "For many years past Germany has been unable to produce enough cereals to supply her people with bread. In fact the root of the present war seems to me to lie in the idea that the Fatherland must push out to find room for its children. Taking all things into consideration it doesn't seem possible that Germany can hold out for more than a few months."

By WILLIAM GRIEDER

(Greider, a national correspondent for the Washington Post, covered the Senate Watergate hearings and the subsequent impeachment developments.)

WASHINGTON — Our King was ruled by troubled sleep, undone by the ghosts of his secret self.

The nation trembles at this awesome drama which is now complete, the fall of Richard Nixon. It was an ancient epic retold in the brutal poetry of modern life, more gripping than the classics because the stage was real, the theatre was our own democracy.

He seemed so bold and powerful in the sunlight days of his presidency, capable of great moments. Yet, in his private darkness, he was merely weak, nursing old wounds and fears, feeding the stale resentments which wiser men put aside. Americans and the world knew the first, the public leader of commanding stature. The unfolding drama taught them about the second man and his fatal flaws.

"Let's make the next four years the best four years in American history," the President proclaimed in his hour of triumph. He was surrounded by affectionate crowds, saluted by drums and the flourish of trumpets. No one could pull down a leader endorsed so overwhelmingly by the people, supported by 61 per cent of the voters and 49 of the states.

But Richard Nixon's unprecedented victory did not heal his dark wounds or completely satisfy his need for vengeance and vindication. In the privacy of his Oval Office with his re-election assured, he talked of getting even. "I think we are going to fix the son-of-a-bitch," the President told his applauding courtiers, referring to Edward Bennett Williams. "Believe me, we are going to."

At the inaugural podium, he spoke of higher ambitions, a pious vision of his public purpose. "We shall answer to God, to history and to our conscience for the way in which we use these years," he promised the cheering masses before him.

Yet his whispered thoughts in private were of revenge, a battle to be fought and won, no quarter given. "We are all in it together," he reassured his lieutenants. "This is a war. We take a few shots and it will be over. We will give them a few shots and it will be over. Don't worry. I wouldn't want to be on the other side right now, would you?"

Brave, doomed

His loyal friends, a shrinking circle of the faithful, saw Richard Nixon as a modern-day King Lear who raged magnificently in the storm around him. But Nixon lacked Lear's grandeur. Nixon's enemies cast him as Richard The Third, The King who was crippled by his malevolence. But Nixon did not have the eloquence of that other Richard — or his purity of evil purpose. Nixon was confused. Like Macbeth, who listened to the witches' prophecies and found comfort in their riddles. He was both brave in facing his peril but doomed by his blindness to it.

Shakespeare wrote the curse:

He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and beat His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace and fear;

And, you'll know, security Is mortal's chiefest enemy.

For Richard Nixon, the false security was that "mandate of '72." He carried it with him like a shield, as though its magic powers would protect him from any attack by his enemies. As in the tale of that ancient Scottish king, it persuaded Richard Nixon that his throne was safe.

"People who did not accept the mandate of '72," he declared confidently, "who do not want the strong America that I want to build, who do not want the foreign policy leadership that I want to give, who do not want to cut down the size of this government bureaucracy . . . people who do not want these things naturally would exploit any issue, if it weren't Watergate, anything else, in order to keep the President from doing his job."

Evident flaws

Lady Macbeth said it more succinctly: "What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?"

Now that his flaws are so evident, some in the audience indulge a certain self-righteousness at his fall.

It seems just and satisfying and such good theatre. But in this drama the spectators are victims too. The tragic awareness has settled not just upon the man, but upon the nation and its own sense of itself.

He was, as he liked to remind everyone, swelled-overwhelmingly by all of us. And he won the remarkable election victory by espousing the popular values so common to our nation and its past. Hard work and ambition. Civil piety. A pugnacious sense of patriotism. A zest for rugged endeavors. Winning. He used public friends as emblems of what he believed — Billy Graham and the Washington Redskins, Bob Hope and John Wayne and General Patton. His lovely family, a perfect expression of virtuous striving.

And, of course, Richard Nixon has himself the ultimate example of how the tough-minded and talented can struggle upward in America, from the humblest home to positions of wealth and fame. He talked about that often in public and the familiar story of hard work rewarded became part of what we knew about the man.

Then suddenly it seemed he was saying different things about himself, denials which sounded like unintended confessions.

"I made my mistakes," he said as fortune sought for him, "but in all of my years in public life, I have never profited, never profited from public service. I have earned every cent. And in all of my years of public life, I have never obstructed justice. And I think too, that I could say that in my years of public life, that I welcome this kind of examination because people have got to know whether or not their President is a crook. Well, I am not a crook."

People listened to the quavering voice and the feeling spread that, of course, he was.

Now that it is over, the climax seems so natural and inevitable, but it never looked that way as the drama unfolded. On the contrary, at a dozen different junctures it seemed that the President might save himself. Again and again, he was challenged by his enemies and begged by his allies to clear up the matter, to provide the complete factual explanations which would put it to rest. It was the one stroke which was beyond his vast power.

Each time he tried to slay the dragon, it grew another head and came charging back with new fire. Each of his solutions provided an added weapon against him. At one point, Nixon's despair and confusion produced a kind of desperate soliloquy recorded in the White House transcripts. "I don't know. Am I seeing something (unintelligible) that really isn't (unintelligible) or am I?"

Compromise

Belatedly, he came forward in the spring of 1973 to announce that there was a stench in the White House weeks after it was already obvious to the world. His disclosure was too late and not enough. In the fall, he arranged what he thought would be a final gesture of compromise, turning over the tape-recorded evidence to his own selected arbiter. When that scheme ended in the dismissal of Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox, the move to impeach began in earnest.

A month later, Nixon made another drastic miscalculation of his own invincibility. By releasing his own income tax returns, he thought that issue would be settled. But his tax returns only deepened the ugly portrait which events were drawing of him and propelled Congress one more step down the road it didn't want to take.

In private, this man of steel turned out to be malleable and tarnished. He did not sleep well during this period. He made late-night telephone calls to his two trusted mastiffs, Haldeman and Ehrlichman, seeking their reassurances. His family heard him playing the piano, alone, past midnight. His closest pal, Rebozo, took him on high-speed drives along California highways for diversion.

"I'm so sick of this thing," the President confessed in a private moment of torment. "I want to get it done with and over And I don't want to hear about it again."

While destiny closed on the king, his tragedy was enriched by the cast of minor characters around him who also fell. They included slick and cynical men grasping for a share of authority. Haldeman and Ehrlichman, crudely manipulating Nixon's presidential words and gestures like two Madison Avenue Pygmals. John Dean, the facile scorpion whose poison served the President, then stung him. John Mitchell, smug and belligerent, a law-and-order man concealing his contempt for both, Ronald Ziegler, the comic mouthpiece who occasionally got confused himself about what was truth and what was lie.

himself to conceal the organization's crime, mused about the values which led to prison: "I would never say the country caused Watergate. Specific individuals are to blame. But there are certain values, certain characteristics and habits in this country — a design to get ahead, impatience. Our overwhelming legal structure creates in the average businessman, the average worker, a feeling that he must do his share of shaving whether it be on his income tax or his expense account."

The episode was like a classical moment of truth telling, in which the hero's illusions are confronted by reality and are overwhelmed by cynicism. In public, he insisted on a pious view of himself. "I reject the cynical view," he declared at one point, "that politics is inevitably or even usually dirty business." Yet in private he thought it was naive to believe anything else. "Goldwater put it in context," Nixon told John Dean. "He said, 'Well, for Christ's sake, everybody bugs everybody else. We know that.'"

Inner councils

When Nixon turned for help, these were the men who gathered for his inner councils, who, each in his own way, helped undo him. They were his friends of choice, men he selected because they shared his qualities or perhaps because he wished he shared theirs. The real enemy, if turned out, was all around him.

Beyond the inner circle, the subplots unraveled in a medley of personal disasters, muted moments of self-awareness for glib and purposeful young men whose opaque sense of values was shredded by Watergate.

Charles Colson, White House tough guy, became a latter-day witness to Christ: "You've got to put your trust in other things than simply retaliating when you're hit."

Jeb Magruder, the loyal organization man who purged himself to tell the truth because he was always guilty.

Nixon's a character dilemma problem than that. To tell the truth meant to reveal his weaknesses, to confess the White House fears and insecurities, to cut away the petty hatreds and tribal loyalties which led him deeper and deeper into the muck. How can a strong king confess that he is so frail? Indeed, each time the President showed a larger glimpse of his private self, it only made matters worse. People were repelled by what Nixon's men had done, but people were horrified when they saw the private man whom those men worked for.

The thing that is completely misunderstood about Watergate," said Charles Colson, "is that everybody thinks the people surrounding the President were drunk with power . . . But it wasn't arrogance at all. It was insecurity. That insecurity began to breed a form of paranoia. We overreacted to the attacks against us and to a lot of things."

A tale of small men who did not belong in high places who perhaps knew down deep that they did not belong, who wanted desperately to prove that their secret insecurities were wrong.

So the high tragedy is done, but only insensitive partisans can be self-righteous about the outcome. There was no moment of catharsis for the hero, no climactic scene when his rage dissolved into self-awareness.

Painful lesson

That moment of truth is for the nation itself, the audience which learned so painfully about its leader and, thus, about itself. If Richard Nixon was so evil, after all, can the rest of us be so good? If he was a mean-spirited leader, then who chose him?

Nixon's tragedy asks the most serious questions of democracy. If Nixon reflected authentic popular values, then perhaps he showed Americans a coarse picture of ourselves, one we would rather not face. Or, if he misled us and deceived us in his climb to power, then our democratic process failed at the most serious level.

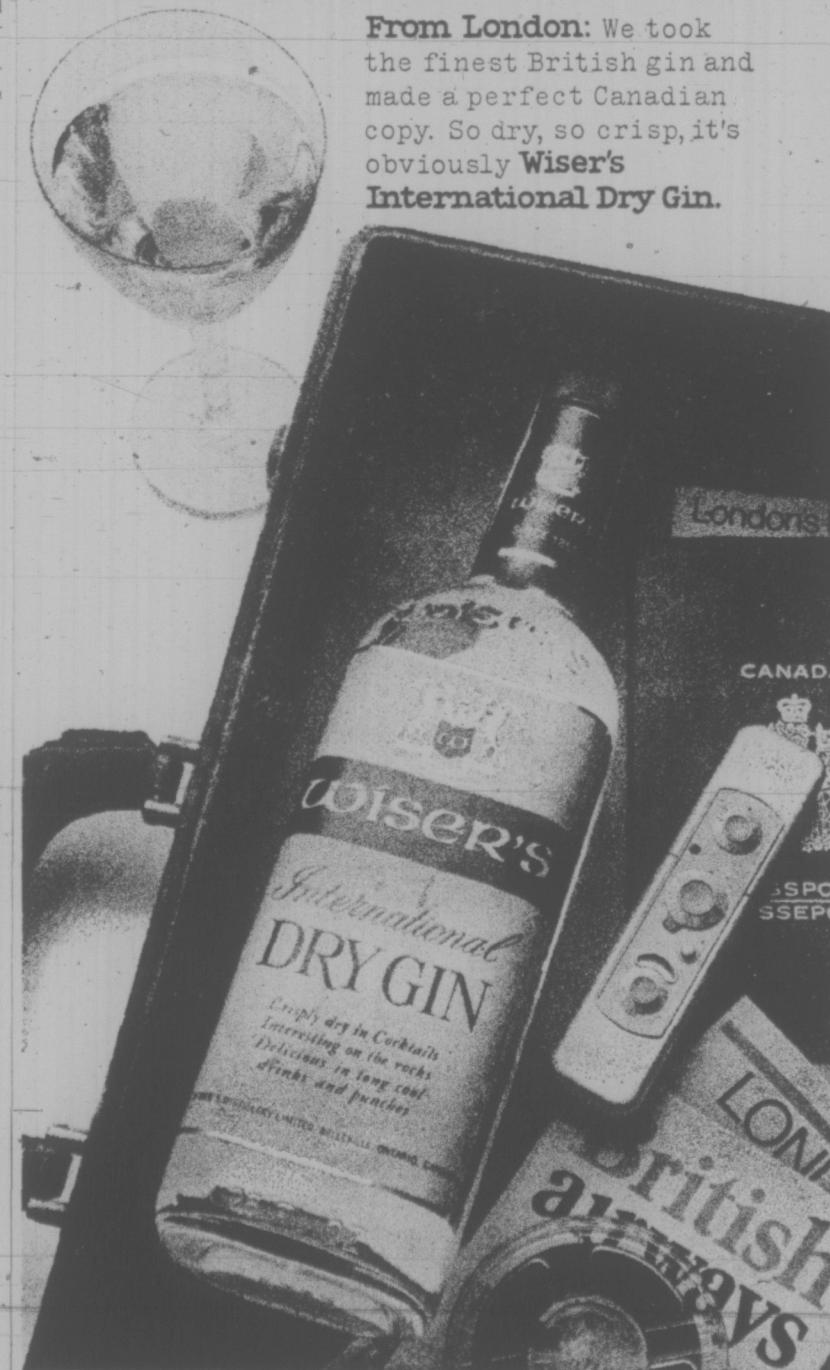

"They have tied me to a stake. I cannot fly," Macbeth roared as Macduff, closed in with death. "But bear-like, I must fight the course." So Nixon said stoutly: "I did an awful lot. I cut off one arm, then the other arm . . . And he fought on."

Charles Colson, White House tough guy, became a latter-day witness to Christ: "You've got to put your trust in other things than simply retaliating when you're hit."

A Legacy of Political Cynicism

By JULES WITCOVER

WITCOVER, a veteran political correspondent for The Washington Post, is the author of books about Robert F. Kennedy, Richard M. Nixon and Spiro T. Agnew.

party, but a further blurring, as candidates seek to distinguish themselves from the discredited pack of professional politicians. A clear trend toward independent voting patterns and identification was under way well before Watergate; it seems certain to grow in its wake.

Already, more voters consider themselves independents (34 per cent) than Republicans (24 per cent), according to the most recent Gallup Poll on the question.

Nor is it just the parties that have been damaged. In a Senate-financed poll by Louis Harris, the White House ranked the lowest in public esteem of 22 institutions of American life, with only 18 per cent of those surveyed expressing confidence in it.

Similarly, in a survey by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research, two of every three persons questioned felt they could trust government only "some of the time." More than half believed that "quite a few" of those running the government were crooked. Also, the President fell from 42 per cent in 1972 to 24 per cent in 1973.

Congress, too, has suffered in the climate of cynicism. Another Harris Survey in early August showed both the President and Congress at only 29 per cent public approval.

But it is the presidency, more than any other political institution, that has been scarred by the Nixon years. There had grown up in the public mind a respect approaching reverence for men elected to the White House, and a kind of mythology about the high plane on which they conducted the nation's business.

The revelations of the true tone of the Nixon presidency, as disclosed in the transcripts of Watergate-related conversations, stripped away those illusions and only intensified the public disaffection.

Some deflation of the presidency, which had grown in the public mind to be an approximation of royalty in the United States, was long overdue. Mr. Nixon inadvertently helped bring about that deflation with the excessive trappings of office he embraced, with the expensive additions to his San Clemente and Key Biscayne homes at taxpayers' expense, and with his own personal income tax troubles.

Also, in his partisanship and the atmosphere of political siege he saw all around him, he subverted the lofty image of the presidency by using the office as a command post for waging political war. He waged it not only against the opposition party, but also against Congress, the press and any segment of the population, like war protesters and student dissenters, that dared be critical of him.

He spoke of ending an era of confrontation in foreign policy and ushering in an era of negotiation, but in domestic politics confrontation was the byword. The presidency was less often heard as a voice of persuasion than as a voice of accusation or intimidation, with resultant alienation of the target group. Under Richard M. Nixon, the public was exhorted repeatedly from the White House to join together for the common good. But the nature of his excessively partisan leadership often caused the public to question whether he himself had the common good in mind.

Politics has been called the art of the possible, and Richard Nixon in his rise to the presidency had been widely lauded as a master of the art. Yet there was seldom in his presidency the essential quality of compromise that is the essence of achieving the possible. Rather, he was a fiercely give-no-quarter politician, driven by failure not to accommodation but to isolation and divisive excess.

Democratic incumbents complained that it wasn't so, but they — like republicans who had nothing to do with Watergate and denounced it early and often — cringed in anticipation of voter revolt against incumbents in the November elections.

The upshot of all this cynicism is likely to be, in the immediate future at least, not the sharpening of party lines and identification that Mr. Nixon sought in trying to build a majority

Despite Disaster Forecasts B.C. Oilfield Outlook Good

CHARLIE LAKE, B.C. (CP) — The outlook in British Columbia's oilfields is good in spite of predictions a year ago that disaster would follow the provincial government's doubling of petroleum royalties.

The fields stretch 400 miles along the northern B.C.-Alberta border.

British Columbia's first oil, produced in this area, was reached at depths of about 4,000 feet at costs of about $70,000 a well.

South of Dawson Creek, the drills now are preparing to go 20,000 feet down and the companies are looking at costs in the $2 million range.

They are willing to spend such amounts in a bid to find new resources which they can then tie up for the future.

Industry observers say there is considerable significance in the re-appearance in B.C. of some of the major oil companies.

Phillips Petroleum (Canada) Ltd., a subsidiary of Oklahoma-based Phillips Petroleum Co., and Imperial Oil Ltd., have both been putting money in the ground in this area after staying out of the province for 10 years.

Most discoveries in B.C. have been natural gas, most of which goes for export.

The province produces only about one-sixth of its own oil needs but many believe there are large fields yet to be found as the drills go deeper and deeper.

Mayor Peter Frankiw of Fort St. John, a contractor servicing the oil rigs, was one who predicted heavy unemployment would follow the increase in royalties.

He is happy he was wrong.

"The activity this past winter has been very good and the service industry has been very good," he said.

"One of the things that has occurred this winter more than in the past six or eight years is that many of the wells being drilled are deep, not this 4,000 foot shallow stuff where they are on the hole for four days and then move on."

He said establishment of firm guidelines by the B.C. Energy Commission is partly responsible for the activity.

"They have reached an agreement with Westcoast Transmission and the increase to the producer has been good," he said.

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., whose pipeline network carries natural gas from the northern fields to the lower B.C. mainland and the Canada-U.S. border south of Vancouver, operates as a common carrier on a cost-of-service basis. The provincial government, through the B.C. Petroleum Corporation, buys the natural gas from producers and sells it to provincial and export customers.

Westcoast's gas-cleaning plant at Taylor now is working at capacity and expansion is under way at a newer plant near Fort Nelson.

Tony Brummet, former president of the associated chambers of commerce in the Peace River region, says the government was saved by the world oil crisis.

"Right now it would not matter how bad the royalties were," he said. "There is great interest."

Montreal Listing For Atco

MONTREAL (CP) — Shares of Atco Industries Ltd. were listed Wednesday on the Montreal Stock Exchange, a step officers of the Calgary-based company say they took "to assure our presence in Eastern Canada."

In a news conference held shortly after trading opened, exchange and company officers said the listing was sought as a service to Quebec investors who own about 75 per cent of floating shares of the company.

The company, which manufactures transportable industrial and residential structures widely used at remote construction sites around the world, was previously listed only on the Toronto exchange.

Atco officers said they expect sales of $150 million this year, compared with $106 million in 1973.

Michel Belanger, Montreal exchange president, said the currently depressed market should not adversely affect the listing because it is not an initial offering and is not being done for further stock distribution.

"When the market turns up, it (Atco stock) will be available," Belanger said.

Atco has manufacturing operations in Canada, the U.S. and Australia, prompting R.D. Southern, president, to describe it as a "mini-multinational corporation."

$33,000 FOR CABINET AIDE

The provincial cabinet has acquired a new assistant in the form of a "planning adviser" who will receive $33,000 a year for assisting the cabinet "in overall planning and policy co-ordination."

Marc Eliesen, a 33-year-old former planning secretary to the Manitoba cabinet, assumed his new post this week.

For two years with the Manitoba cabinet, Eliesen was assistant deputy minister of finance to the Manitoba government and served as an economist and research director for various federal government departments.

A spokesman for the premier's department said Eliesen has been in Victoria a short time but his duties officially began Thursday with a cabinet order approving his appointment.

Premier Barrett said in a written statement he welcomed the new position because it will "assist the cabinet in overall planning and policy co-ordination."

From Booze to Paradise

DALLAS (UPI) — Sam Ventura got tired of serving highballs and wine after 40 years, so diners in his cafe get a blend of milk and honey called a Paradise Special and listen to hymns.

"I have vomited on cursing out and had to take car keys away from drunks," he said. "But no more. I knew there was something else. It's a pleasure going to work now."

Ventura's Italian Village

used to book such acts as Buddy Greco and Frank Sinatra Jr.

After some successful years, a fire and a financial reversal made him decide to change directions.

"I was about to go broke,

But last Dec. 10 I was down at Channel 39 (KXTX, a religion-oriented TV station) making an ad for the restaurant," he said.

"Just before it started, I was kidding, being cynical about it. I said, 'if you want the advertisement to turn out good, why don't you all pray about it?'

The whole crew, six or seven people, started praying for me.

I learned later that one of them had flipped a monitor switch and everybody in the station was praying. I looked around and laughed at them. I thought they were a bunch of idiots.

"They got to the point in the prayer where somebody was praying for the commercial. I needed money so I prayed for that. When I did, it was just like somebody had plugged me into the wall. I had a warm electrical feeling."

Raised a Catholic, he recently started going to a Baptist church. The Baptists hate liquor, but Ventura said he had closed his bar before that.

Ventura has had his problems since he opened the Christian Cafe.

Two-thirds of his business drifted away. He closed the steak house and fish house because there wasn't enough business left to keep them open.

A lot of his help quit. They told him drinkers tip better than those who don't.

But he remains optimistic.

"I hit the bottom and I'm on the way up," he said. "My story is getting around. I didn't think I had a chance. But I'm breaking even now."

MAMI — A 74-year-old woman was arrested this week on a narcotics smuggling charge. Customs agents found 1½ pounds of cocaine with a street value of $350,000 sewn into a rug she brought here.

"People often ask us for a profile of the typical narcotics smuggler. Who's looking for a 74-year-old woman?" one customs man said.

GENEVA PARK, Ont. — Canada can help feed a hungry world if world marketing problems are resolved, Eugene Whelan, federal agricultural minister, told the 43rd annual Couchiching conference Thursday.

"Marketing is the weakest link in the chain that moves food from the farmers to the starving people of the world," he said, is not that of increasing farm production, but rather providing long-term confidence in the market-place.

LONDON — Patrick McCarthy, a 23-year-old student at the London Opera Centre, staged an unexpected debut at the Royal Albert Hall.

McCarthy had only intended to listen, until baritone Thomas Allen collapsed after the start of Carl Orff's Carmina Burana.

The young singer knew the role, so he volunteered and conductor Andre Previn waved him on to the stage. The packed audience gave the young performer a standing ovation.

NEW YORK — A memorial service will be held today for singer-actor Robert Rounseville, who died in his Carnegie Hall studio at the age of 60.

He appeared as the Rake in the original 1951 performance of Igor Stravinsky's opera The Rake's Progress, in Italy. Later that year, he made his film debut in Offenbach's Tales of Hoffman.

Rounseville also was credited with introducing the song Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition.

WHELAN

Denis Wallace Charles, 18, pleaded guilty Thursday to obtaining transportation by fraud from Victoria Taxi Ltd. cab driver Bill Kaiser.

But, after hearing the circumstances of the case from prosecutor Peter Birkett, Ostler suggested Charles plead not guilty and set Nov. 13 as the trial date.

Charles got in Kaisers taxi in downtown Victoria and asked to be driven to Becher Bay.

Charles, Birkett said, fell asleep about half way on the trip.

The taxi driver tried unsuccessfully for 30 minutes to wake up his passenger to collect the fare of $12.60.

He finally gave up and drove Charles to the police station.

Trial Set In Alleged Taxi Fraud

July 12 from a car lot on Cedar Hill X Road and drove around Saanich with two juveniles until spotted by police at Queenswood and Arbutus.

Two persons were fined for possession of marijuana: Richard Melvin Barry, of 6621 Helgesen, was fined $100 and Kerry Lee Murray, 25, of 425 Wilson, was fined $75.

Christina Johanna Noble, 25, of 646 Admirals, was fined $300 for impaired driving.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A William Head inmate who was free from custody for a month was sentenced in provincial court Thursday to a one-year term for being unlawfully at large.

James Wenda Willson, 19, who had earlier pleaded not guilty and had asked for a county court trial, changed his plea when he appeared for a regular remand.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Willson disappeared into a crowd attending a hockey game at Memorial Arena March 19 and was recaptured April 17 by RCMP at Prince George.

Willson was serving time for break and entry, escape, and theft when he went at large.

Birkett said Willson's criminal record, composed of nine convictions since 1971.

Judge William Ostler noted Willson has been in "pretty constant trouble" since he was 16 and suggested he should discipline himself.

"Until you do," Ostler said, "you're just going to have a wretched life."

Willson apologized to Ostler for any inconvenience he had.

caused and said he just wanted to serve his term and "lead a life like yourself."

Dorothy Ellen Haylow, 22, of 2317 Forbes, was given a two-month jail term and placed on probation for a year when she was sentenced on a fraud charge.

Miss Haylow pleaded guilty July 16 to the charge, which stemmed from using a stolen credit card between July 4 and 10 to buy goods worth $911 from Victoria stores.

She was also given a concurrent one-month sentence for breach of probation connected with the fraud charge.

A 17-year-old youth was fined $150 after pleading guilty to taking a car without the owner's consent.

Lawrence James Morberg, 16, of 57 Morningside, took a car

Dowling's office and then Provincial-Secretary departmental staff began the task of trying to reach each member personally.

Cabinet ministers were contacted initially and the RCMP were called in to locate ministers who were not at home.

Education Minister and Deputy Premier Eileen Dailey was contacted aboard the family's pleasure craft during the night and the boat docked at Sidney today to allow her to attend the sitting.

Opposition MLAs and government members were sought next.

A government plane will round up interior MLAs who couldn't make other arrangements and politicians driving to Victoria will be granted priority on B.C. Ferries.

Some MLAs, including Socred Jim Chabot (Columbia River) arrived in Victoria Thursday only to discover the first session was cancelled and were already home or on their way when the second sitting was called.

Hall said the "most simple and direct answer" he received to the second summons came from NDP member Gerry Anderson (Kamloops) who had just returned to his home after a futile trip to Victoria.

"I just walked in the door," Anderson said when he received the call.

Anything else the MLA said could be classed as "explosive deleted," said Hall.

Meanwhile, in the building, workers were clearing up, preparing Hansard facilities and lighting and hoping to have enough desks organized for the 55 MLAs.

Half the desks had been at the carpenters for repair.

Clerks, sergeant at arms and other additional staff were called to work and officials from the speaker's office said the sitting was to operate like any regular session of the house.

No formal opening of the house will be required, however, since the legislature was only adjourned, not prorogued, on June 20, when the spring session of the legislature was completed.

King's office said the minister would make no statements prior to the sitting but he was expected to make a full statement to the house.

The minister and the government as a whole were attacked by the opposition Thursday for the handling of the strike and several opposition members said the special session should have gone ahead that day even after the firefighters went back to work.

All three opposition parties have said the new Labor Code, which gives essential services such as fire and police forces the right to strike, should be changed immediately.

Prior to 1968, firefighters and policemen did not have the right to strike because a section of the Municipal Act ruled that unresolved contract negotiations would be given a final and binding settlement by the old conciliation boards.

The Social Credit government withdrew that section, thus giving firefighters and policemen the right to strike, but instituted cabinet power to deal with strikes and lockouts affecting "the public interest and welfare" under the Mediation Commission Act.

The cabinet had power to send such disputes to the three-man mediation commission for final and binding decisions.

The New Democratic Party government, after its election in 1972, amended the Mediation Commission Act at a special fall session, retitling it the Mediation Services Act and repealing the sections dealing with the cabinet's power in "public interest and welfare" disputes.

This left the power in the hands of the legislature and this position was continued when the government passed the Labor Code of B.C. Act last year.

"But if the prices are actually biased downward, as we suspect they are, it could have a quite profound effect on revenues," he said.

Pearce, a natural resource economist, said his task force believes prices on the Vancouver log market are deflated because the market is not competitive.

The market, which handles about 14 per cent of coastal timber (the remainder being dealt with internally by the major forest companies), is dominated by large integrated companies that use the logs simply to swap timber.

The swapping system means the logs are not based solely on their value and also prevents independent non-integrated logging firms from entering that market.

The new timber authority would have the power to purchase any logs which are available for sale on the market and sell them at a competitive price.

Resources Minister Bob Williams, who released the report, agreed some profit might accrue to the authority in its role as middleman but said the main purpose would be to make the market competitive and to allow independent forestry operators a new, stronger position in the market.

The report is the second produced by the three-man task-force which also includes Canadian Cellulose Co. director of planning Arvid Backman and provincial chief forester Ted Young.

Those changes will net the government a $31 million income in revenues.

Overall cost of operating the task force for the entire fiscal year is estimated at $275,000.

The report recommends the new timber authority act as an independent agent of the crown similar to the B.C. Petroleum Corporation and suggests the new appraisal board consist of three to five persons.

Other recommendations of the task force include:

- improving and expanding the data collection done by the Vancouver log market;

- forest service become more self-reliant and dependent less on forest companies for resource information and sales values;

- revision of provisions for determining profit and risk to reflect these allowances directly to capital requirements; and

- more accurate field measurements, cost assessments and other appraisal measurements.

Cause of the fire is unknown.

provincial revenues "by several million dollars" each, he said, include elimination of "55-cent wood", elimination of maximum stumpage rates, and an increase in the minimum stumpage rate to $2.

Downward pressures on Crown revenues would come from more accurate cost recognition, he said, as well as adoption of appraisals based on the value of the timber stand as a whole rather than by individual species of timber.

The impact of the timber authority is difficult to assess, said Pearce, because forestry companies insist the prices on the Vancouver log market are an accurate reflection of timber value.

"But if the prices are actually biased downward, as we suspect they are, it could have a quite profound effect on revenues," he said.

SUBWAY STILL SHUT

MONTREAL (CP) — The city's subway system will remain closed for the third consecutive day today as about 1,800 subway and office workers continued their strike to back cost-of-living demands.

Union president Jacques Beaujolin said pickets will be set up at Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission facilities despite a ban on such action in the injunction.

Lou's Mathematics Don't Bother Eagle

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions fullback Lou Harris is obviously not the world's greatest mathematician.

But it's probable that Lions' head coach Eagle Keys could care less and Harris led the Lions to a 26-6 victory over Winnipeg Blue Bombers in action Thursday night.

Late in the game, Harris turned to team-mate Curtis Wester and said: "I hope I get 100 yards."

Seconds later Harris and the crowd of 24,569 heard through the public address speakers that Harris had just passed the 200-yard rushing mark.

The sophomore ball carrier totalled 202 yards and scored a pair of touchdowns in the third victory of the year for Lions, now first in the WFC. Their 3-0 start is the club's best since 1963 when they won their first four games.

Bombers, on the other hand, have lost twice. Both setbacks have come at the hands of B.C., the first a 29-22 defeat last week in Winnipeg.

Lions had 26 first downs to 11 by the Bombers and rushed for 335 yards compared with Winnipeg's 117.

"It's the most yards I've rushed since my high school days in Sacramento," Harris said. He alluded to some shoddy defensive play by the Bombers when he added, "I don't know if it was my breaking tackles or their sloppy tackling."

Whatever the reasons, Harris looked impressive as he dodged and darted his way to a club rushing record.

But Harris wasn't the game's only star. Ex-Bomber defensive back Grady Cawness picked off two of Winnipeg quarterback Don Jonas' passes and also recovered a fumble.

Harris opened the scoring in the first quarter on a one-yard plunge and Ivan MacMillan converted. Lions made it 8-0 in the second quarter on a MacMillan single from the Winnipeg 36 then made it 15-0 on a 12-yard touchdown pass from Don Moorhead to Slade Willis and converted by MacMillan.

Bombers came back three plays after the Willis major with a 56-yard scoring play on a pass from Don Jonas to running back Tom Scott.

But 57 seconds into the third quarter Harris broke away for a 62-yard major which MacMillan converted and Lions had a 22-6 lead. MacMillan added a field goal and Willis a 60-yard single in the fourth quarter to round out the scoring.

Moorhead threw all 26 B.C. passes, completing 14 for 117 yards. Jonas was good on nine of 22 passes for 126 yards and Ralph Brock, who called Winnipeg signals in the final quarter, completed one of two passes for 12 yards.

The Lions picked off three of Jonas' attempted passes with Elton Brown's interception of major consequence. Bombers were at the B.C. 14 yard line, facing third down, when Brown prevented what appeared a touchdown with his interception. As it turned out, that was the last time the Bombers were to get close.

Dawson Creek Boys Defy Odds To Blast Esquimalt-Vic West

Dawson Creek ignored the odds and proceeded to hand Esquimalt-Victoria West a 14-1 loss before about 2,000 fans Thursday to force a deciding game in the B.C. Little League baseball championship tournament at Lambrick Park.

Tonight's game, which sends one team to the Canadian tournament, starting Monday in Eriindale, Ont., begins at 6:30.

Esquimalt, previously unbeaten in the tourney, knocked Dawson Creek into the losers' bracket with a 3-0 win during their first meeting in the five-team, double-loss elimination affair.

On Thursday, Ron Superault held Esquimalt to four hits and received some faultless fielding for the victory while Dawson Creek hitters worried four Esquimalt pitchers for 11 hits.

Esquimalt, which had only three errors in their past three games, committed seven errors and allowed seven unearned runs.

Arch MacLean and Tyler Massie drove in two runs each and Kevin Campbell drove in one run and scored three times to lead Dawson Creek's batting parade.

Campbell got Dawson Creek scoring underway in the second inning by leading off with a single. He then advanced twice on passed balls and scored on a throwing error to first base after Robert Hodak cracked a grounder to second.

Michael Bitten connected for a double and singles were supplied by Jim Sharpe, Russ Hafer and Mike Bull for Esquimalt.

Hafer scored the lone run for the host club by singling, advancing on Sharpe's single and scoring on Paul Richard's ground out.

Mike Bull, who is unbeaten in the playoffs and pitched the two-hitter shutout against Dawson Creek in the earlier game, is expected to start for Esquimalt-Vic West tonight while the northern interior champion is expected to go with two-time winner Charles Banza.

Salmon Derby Fever Strikes Cowichan Bay

Cowichan Bay is seething with derby fever. That's the word from Bucky Kennett of Duncan, who says Cow Bay area prospects are good for fishermen taking part in the 7th annual Export "A" World Salmon Championship fishfest Saturday and Sunday.

Chinooks have formed the main part of the catch this past week and there are likely a few lunkers about that would top the 33-pound, five-ounce fish which brought Duncan's Ken Mayea the $25,000 top prize last year.

Top weights have been 33 pounds in the Bay and along the west side of Separation Point, 32 pounds in Sansum Narrows and 37 pounds off Bold Bluff.

Moochers using 80 to 100 plus of line are having the best success but trollers are still picking up some good returns using strip teasers and flashers, white or green and white booties and five or six-inch "Pink Pearl". Lucky Louie plugs.

Some chinooks are already heading up the Cowichan River so another good spot to try might be along the western boundary line of the derby.

Remember to get up early. Cowichan Bay is traditionally an early morning fishery with the major bite on between early dawn and 9 a.m.

And good luck to you all.

Anyone not participating in the derby also faces prospects this weekend.

Chinooks up to 12 pounds form about three-quarters of the catch in Finlayson Arm and coho up to eight pounds make up the balance. Returns have been from scattered spots, working deep with bait or fairly shallow with small spoons.

Waters off Bamerton and Coles Bay are yielding limits of chinooks up to 10 pounds along with the odd coho. Late risers should be prepared to go as deep as 200 feet near the middle of the day with small spoons, booties or strip.

Fishermen trolling near the Deep Cove marker with strip or red booties have picked up chinooks up to 26 pounds and a few coho around the four pound mark.

Use super-strip at varying depths for chinooks up to 15 pounds near Trial Island.

Many limits of jacks and a few coho around five pounds have been taken on strip using 12 ounces of weight and 60 to 80 feet of line along the Eentincle Island kelp bed.

Beechey Head and Alldridge Point waters are producing a lot of chinooks in the five to eight pound range and a few tipping the scales to 25 pounds along with numerous coho up to seven pounds. Fish with a minnow from 30 to 80 feet deep.

Tops for Sooke waters was a 26-pounder although a lot of smaller chinooks have been ending up in fish boxes.

Jack's Point near Nanaimo is starting to yield an ever-increasing number of chinooks, some weighing as much as 42 pounds, while other good returns were reported from Page's Point and the Brickyard.

Near Sangster and Lasqueti islands, fishermen have been landing coho averaging five to six pounds on yellow booties.

Rainey Bay, Kirby Point and Holford Bay, at the mouth of Alberni Inlet, have been good spots to try for both chinooks and large coho.

Bates Beach vicinity is an "off-on-off" proposition for chinooks up to 30 pounds along with a few coho. Better catches of the latter species were taken off Deep Bay, Chrome Island and North Rock.

Tree-sized chinooks up to 47 pounds and coho up to 10 are spicing action between Cape Mudge and Francisca Point for trollers using stubby plugs or bait and rowboats using large spoons are starting to pick up similar catches in Tyee and Frenchman's Pools.

Coho are biting best on strip, purple, red or green booties and small spoons.

Victoria-area fishermen appear to be doing quite well in Muchalat Inlet.

L. Ross Alexander of Metchosin landed a 60-pound tyee in the vicinity while Barry Rankin and Gordie Strongman boated a number of chinooks weighing up to 35 pounds, including a doubleheader, near Bligh Island.

Sam Can Still 'Burn' Course

CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — Ten years ago golfer Sam Snead said that because Jack Nicklaus started to play golf so young he will burn himself out before he's 30.

This prediction came home to roost for the 62-year-old veteran as Snead and Nicklaus found themselves tied at 69, just one stroke off the pace going into today's second round of the 56th PGA golf championship.

Nicklaus not only has not burned himself out, but has amassed 14 major titles and, at 34, appears only to be getting his second wind in the game.

And Snead himself is still a masterful shotmaker and a PGA title threat after 84 tour victories and 40 years on the professional circuit.

"I guess it all depends on whether you can keep on liking the game," said Snead. "I'm still playing because I keep at it. I love the game. You've got to say the same for Jack."

Nicklaus bunched with four others at 69 and 10 bracketed at even par 70—only three shots blanketing 19 competitors.

The tournament leaders, at 68, are Ray Floyd, Hubert Green and John Schlee.

Hobnobbing with Snead and Nicklaus, one shot back at 69, are Bobby Cole of South Africa, Tom Watson, Leonard Thompson and rookie Eddie Pearce.

Arnold Palmer, 44, bogeyed the last hole for a 72.

Other big-name players also had their problems.

Johnny Miller, the season's leading money-winner, bogeyed the final hole and shot 71, where he was tied with seven others, including Chi Chi Rodriguez and former PGA winner Dave Stockton.

Bobby Nichols, the new Canadian Open champion, and Gay Brewer, Jr., were among the 14 in Palmer's bracket at 72. Gary Player, Lee Trevino, England's Tony Jacklin, and former Masters king Tommy Aaron were in a list of 15 who shot 73. Tom Weiskopf had a 75.

Adanacs Tie Leaders; Clinch Playoff Berth

NEW WESTMINSTER
Coquitlam Adanacs clinched third place and knocked Victoria Shamrocks out of playoff contention by playing league-champion New Westminster Salmonbellies to an 8-8 deadlock Thursday.

The single point put Adanacs five points ahead of the Irish with only two games remaining for each club and gave the Coquitlam team the final playoff spot.

Adanacs scored late in the third period to force overtime and then took an 8-7 lead when Salmonbellies' goalie Joe Comeau appeared to knock the ball into his own net.

Wayne Goss knotted the count for New Westminster with only 20 seconds left in the 10-minute overtime session.

Seaboard Pitcher Spins One-Hitter

Barry Wilkin pitched a one-hitter Thursday night to lead Seaboard Construction to a 6-0 shutout over Sooke Merchants at Sooke Athletic Park and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League semi-final series.

Wilkin struck out nine batters, allowed only two base-on-balls.

Bruce Butler hammered out a single in the fourth inning to erase Wilkin's chances of a perfect game.

MEN FROM BIG SHIPS of Canada's west coast navy find relaxation and recreation in off-duty hours by testing skill with smaller craft and sail.

These dinghy enthusiasts are members of Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association. (See story below.)

Navy Types Still Have Place To Develop Skills with Sails

Sailing ships with tall spars are long gone from Canada's navy but it's still breeding place for some of the country's finest "rag haulers". Most of these belong to one of the 14 squadrons of the Canadian Armed Forces Sailing Association that are located across the country.

Not all the victories go to those who make the sea their calling. While in Manitoba recently I met an old friend, Capt. Don Freudenberg, who's living proof of this.

A test pilot with the air force, Don and his crew won the CFSA nationals three years in a row, shattering tradition in more than one way. Instead of filling his victory trophy with the traditional "Nelsons Blood" the first year he won it, Don substituted a brimful measure of Scotch.

The second year the navy was wise to Don's tricks. Rear-Admiral Harry Porter, in presenting the trophy, also handed over a 40-cent bottle of whisky to help fill it!

The CFSA's Esquimalt Squadron is one of the most active and if you're a serving or retired member of any of the armed forces' branches, a civilian employee of the defence department or a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, there's no better bargain in sailing than a CFSA Membership.

Service members from the bulk of the squadron but civilian and RCMP enthusiasts can become associate members on a quota basis.

The fees are about one-tenth of those charged by most yacht clubs and even if you don't own a boat you can still knowledge of his boat and a sincere respect for the elements."

The squadron also plays an active role in promoting boat safety through its affiliation with the Council of B.C. Yacht Clubs an disupport of the B.C. Sailing Association's youth sailing programs.

While CFSA types know how

Ed Haines' Lotte split her mast in the testing. Many will remember Lotte when she was one of the top boats around these waters under the skilful helming of Jorgen Baas.

The race was won by John Ellis' Isis of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club with George Parkes' Fairlight and Brian Saunders' Impulse, of the same club, placing second and third.

Impulse cleaned up in the three-race keel boat series, edging out Dick Readshaw's Massilia II of RVYC and Paul Jensen's Dania of CFSA.

Dinghy sailors from the Kit-silano Yacht Club made their mark in centre-board competition. A. Willett placing first in Fireballs and clubmate T. Gardner, third. In between them was CFSA sailor Dennis Carlow, who will be in Kingston, Ont., this month to compete in Canada's dinghy classic — the Canadian Olympic sailing trials.

G. Kirkwood of KYC won in Lasers, being followed by C. Nicholes of CFSA and Ian Pickels of RVYC. In Enterprises it was CFSA's Frank Towler, followed by RVYC sailors Dana Dalquist and Bruce Duncan.

get in plenty of sailing in the squadron's boats.

The fleet includes 13 420s, for my money one of the finest two-man dinghies in which to learn, as well as seven 27-foot Sailerboats.

Dinghy racing takes place all year round while keel boats have spring, summer and fall series of their own.

I agree with Cmdr. Dennis Reiley, the squadron's secretary when he says:

"Primarily through competition, an individual learns the true art of sailing, an awareness of his own capabilities, to sail hardly anyone who's attended one of their parties in Munro Head clubhouse will verify they follow their onshore pursuits with as much fervor!"

This is why their annual regattas, such as the one held on the weekend, are popular with sailors of other yacht clubs in the area.

Dinghy racing takes place all year round while keel boats have spring, summer and fall series of their own.

Twenty-five knot winds and five-foot waves whipped things off to a good start Friday but there was only one casualty in the long-distance race from Cadboro Bay to Esquimalt.

In the Letson Match, Carl Ovcharick of Glen Meadows took the lead with a 76 while Andy Hone of Royal Colwood and Kelly Oulton of Cedar Hill shared second place with 78.

Stuart Holroyd of Gorge Vale and Albert Selina of Royal Colwood were next at 79 and Gary Doherty of Cedar Hill was sixth with 80.

Uplands will be the site of the next tour round on Wednesday.

JUNIOR GRID LEAGUE KICKS OFF ON SUNDAY

Victoria Dolphins will face Renfrew Trojans in one of two games which kick off the Big Four Junior Canadian Football League season Sunday at Empire Stadium.

Dolphins and Trojans meet at 6 p.m. and North Shore Cougars tackle Blue Bombers at 8 in the season's openers.

Three juvenile division games will get underway at 12 noon.

'Big Six' Hockey Starts with Five

A new hockey league is in the offing for Vancouver Island this winter.

It will be called the Southern Island Big Six League, but only five teams are in.

Organizer Ivan Temple of Victoria says provisions have been made for a sixth team.

No-Hitter At Camas

CAMAS, Wash. (AP) — Jerry Green threw a no-hitter Wednesday to lead Camas-Washougal to a 6-0 whitewash of Big Sky, Mont., in the first round of the Pacific Northwest Babe Ruth sectional baseball tournament.

Green struck out 20 batters in the seven-inning game, walked one, had three hits and drove in two runs for the host team.

In the other game Wednesday, Idaho Falls erupted for six runs in the second inning and went on to trim Lander, Wyo. 7-0.

Victoria All-Stars, who dropped their tourney opener 4-0 to Kirkland, Wash., play Ketchikan, Alaska, in the losers' bracket tonight.

Riflemen Notch Perfect Scores

SOUTH MARCH, Ont. — Fritz Salevsky of Nanaimo and seven rivals turned perfect scores during the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association annual meet near Ottawa Thursday.

Alain Marion of Hull, Que., Bob Pitcairn of Delta, B.C., Bert Whitaker of England, Gerry Ouellette of Windsor, Ont., and Salevsky all scored a perfect 105 points in the Letson Match, a competition calling for seven rounds each at distances of 200, 300 and 600 yards.

Winners of the matches were decided by the number of V-bulls scored — how many times the competitor hit the inner circle of the bull's-eye.

In the Letson Match, Marion hit 16 V-bulls to take top honors. Pitcairn and Whitaker each had 15. Ouellette had 13 and Salevsky 12.

In the Connaught Match, Kerr took top spot with 13 V-bulls, followed by Marion with 12 and Cameron with 11.

Quiet Man of Athletics Makes Big Noise at Bat

By The Associated Press

Unobtrusive Joe Rudi of the Oakland A's, considered somewhat of an introvert by his more talkative teammates, is making big noises at the plate this year.

Rudi knocked in five runs with two singles, a double and a home run Thursday night to lead the A's to a 10-2 rout of Texas Rangers and embellish his flashy offensive figures.

"Baseball" people know he's a solid player, although I've heard he's underrated," said Oakland manager Alvin Dark.

Rudi is hitting .310 with 72 RBI and 13 home runs.

In other American League games, Milwaukee Brewers stopped Boston Red Sox 5-3; California Angels downed Chicago White Sox 6-4; Detroit Tigers nipped Cleveland Indians 4-3 and Minnesota Twins beat Kansas City Royals 3-2 in 14 innings.

Along with Rudi, Jesus Alou had a good night for the A's. Alou opened the game with a first-pitch home run and added two singles, driving in two other runs.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter breezed to his 16th victory against nine losses, scattering nine hits.

Rudi crashed a solo homer in the third inning, added two singles, then capped his evening with a bases-loaded double that cleared the bases in the sixth inning.

Don Money's double keyed a four-run third inning as Milwaukee whipped Boston to snap a string of six straight complete-game victories by Luis Tiant.

The Brewers had lost eight of their past nine starts, including three to the Red Sox.

Doug Howard singled to drive in the tying run, then scored on Ellie Rodriguez' single in a three-run eighth inning that carried California past Chicago.

Manager Danny Ozark, of Philadelphia Phillies has the National League East championship race all figured out.

The Phillies moved to within one-half game of first place St. Louis Thursday night, nipping Chicago 2-1 for their third straight victory over the Cubs.

"All we have to do is what we did today, yesterday and the day before," said Ozark.

"Forget about the other guys. Just keep winning. Eventually, we'll get to where we're supposed to be."

That seems to be exactly the strategy being employed by the hard-charging Pittsburgh Pirates, who moved to within 3½ games of the top by defeating New York Mets 4-3.

Elsewhere, Montreal Expos trimmed St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 in 13 innings and Atlanta Braves shut out Houston Astros 1-0.

Philadelphia's victory was the fourth straight and fifth in six games for the second-place Phillies, who kept the pressure on first-place St. Louis.

STAMPLESS SMOKE PACKS NOT BOOTLEG

OTTAWA (CP) — If the next packet of cigarettes you buy doesn't have that familiar grey stamp sealing one end, relax. You won't be smoking bootleg tobacco because the government is doing away with the stamp.

Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury announced that the excise stamp, which has appeared on cigarette and tobacco packages since 1864, is being eliminated to save money.

To be effective by Aug. 19, the new system will be an imprint on the package showing the weight of tobacco or number of cigars and cigarettes as well as the words Canada — duty paid.

Sen. Paul Martin said he wanted out of his post as government Senate leader and expressed pleasure at the prospects of a coming appointment, although he would not say what it is.

Jean-Eudes Dube said he will have to resign his New Brunswick seat of Restigouche. He is expected to be named a judge of the Federal Court, the judicial body that hears appeals against rulings of federal boards and tribunals.

NO WONDER PARTY-GOER'S CAR SMOKED

WINNIPEG (CP) — It started when Lawrence M. Franks was driving home from a party.

Not wanting to leave his car at the party, he ended up leaving it all over the street, and paying a $850 fine for impaired driving, and driving while suspended.

Court was told police noticed the car smoking heavily, with the left front tire flat, the left rear tire wobbling and extensive damage to one side while proceeding along a South Winnipeg street.

While the police were following the car, the muffler fell off and then the front tire as the car went through a red light before stalling about 200 feet down the road.

An examination of the area found the car had collided with a light standard, two trees and a water sprinkler.

The 21-year-old Franks had a blood alcohol reading of .273. The legal limit is .08.

He pleaded guilty to the charges.

RCMP said Andrew Stewart was hit by the log which rolled off a log pile on which he was standing.

Andrew was flown by RCMP helicopter to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Johnson-Store Deep in History

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

"Without a doubt the area has considerable history to it."

Those are the words of Alisile Helmcken, City Hall archivist, who, as a boy, knew the Johnson-Store-Cormorant area in its more prosperous days.

Now, developer and city alderman, Sam Bawlf, is planning to breathe new life into half a block of brick buildings behind the Government Street liquor store.

Bawlf, manager of Fort Victoria Properties Limited, plans to spend $2 to $3 million to create a year-round produce and flower market, in what now is a parking lot, and repair and restore old buildings.

Helmcken is nothing less than enthusiastic, both about the area's history and plans to restore it.

"There can be no doubt that part of Johnson Street is well worth remembering and I applaud Sam Bawlf for his foresight," he said.

More than half the property in Bawlf's plan was built before 1885.

There was the Grand Pacific Hotel, now the Drake, an abundance of hotels and saloons, a blacksmith and a wagon shop.

"At one time there were 15 saloons on Johnson between Wharf and Government," he said.

A schooner of beer costs five cents and for 25 cents you could have a whole meal — a slab of meat, homemade bread and beer.

"The buildings in that part of town served a very, very useful purpose," said Helmcken.

"It's not always realized because of the myths and fables dreamed up about Johnson Street. It was one of our principal areas of commerce. It catered to supplies of ships, and the needs of sailors.

"I know it is difficult for people today, when they see just a couple of ferries a day, but there was a time when there was no room in the harbor for ships that demanded space."

Docks were all along the waterfront. Until 1886, when the E and N rail bridge was opened, there had been no bridge across the Inner Harbor since about 1860. The first bridge was pulled out to allow shipping to go above Johnson.

"So Johnson-Store streets attracted a good deal of maritime business. The area had hotels and, of course, saloons but they also had wholesale and retail groceries, drugists, sailmakers, cigar factories, clothing manufacturers."

The area has another historic note because, right through the middle of the block is the old drainage system which fed down from the View-Vancouver-Cook area which was once a swamp.

Beneath today's building is the bricked-in watercourse.

made necessary around 1880 by a cesspool caused by drainage from the many buildings connected to the watercourse.

Helmcken said Johnson Street did not become "a seedy area as it is imagined now in so many of the stories" until shipping declined with maritime traffic moving to Vancouver and the depression years aided and abetted its downfall.

Bawlf is aware of today's conditions and said he plans to repair several hotels, such as the Senator and the Eastern, which are in "a rather disgraceful condition."

Tenants live in conditions which would shock many Victorians and "I as a landlord am not prepared to allow this situation to continue."

He plans to ask the provincial government if it will pay subsidies so present tenants can afford to pay sufficient rent to cover the upgrading of buildings "for their safety if nothing else."

Helmcken would like to see both the area involved in the restoration and an area to the south opened up to provide public access through alleys.

The alleyway walk would start at the lower end of Fort Street near Open Space to join with Helmcken Alley near the Board of Trade

B.C., JUDGE AT ODDS

The provincial government will appeal a Penticton county court decision to allow Indians aboriginal rights to hunt on traditional hunting grounds without abiding by normal game laws.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Thursday the Crown has decided to appeal that ruling by Judge A. D. Washington.

Washington's ruling, viewed as a major victory in the struggle for aboriginal rights, reversed a lower court conviction of two Indians charged with unlawfully killing game out of season.

Jacob Kruger and Robert Manuel appealed their conviction and defence counsel Wilson Rutherford said the issue at stake was whether all Indians had aboriginal rights.

Rutherford admitted the two men killed four deer on Crown land in September, 1973, without first obtaining hunting licences.

B.C. Indians are now governed by regular game regulations while native people in the three Prairie provinces are allowed to hunt without a permit in order to obtain food on unused Crown land and other areas to which they have legal access.

In his ruling, Judge Washington said it is up to Ottawa to pass legislation to take away the aboriginal rights of native people to hunt for sustenance and that his decision was based on the existing federal law.

FALL PREVIEW

Ottawa Imposes Tax On Airline Tickets

OTTAWA (CP) — A new air transportation tax that will add up to $5 to the cost of many airline tickets was announced Thursday by Transport Minister Jean Marchand.

Effective Oct. 15, the tax replaces a previously-announced across-the-board airport charge of $2.80.

The amount payable will be five per cent of the air fare to a maximum of $5 on tickets to any destination in Canada, the United States except Hawaii and the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon off the Atlantic coast. A flat fee of $5 will be charged on flights to any other destination.

Marchand said in a news release that the decision to impose the tax rather than the airport levy was in response to public and industry opposition to the across-the-board charge.

Marchand said the tax is in line with government policy that the user should pay rising air transport costs instead of the general taxpayer. About 13 per cent of Canadians fly once a year, but only eight per cent fly regularly.

SCOUT KNOCKED
CLIFF

An 11-year-old Kelowna boy is in fair condition in the intensive care ward of Victoria General Hospital today after falling from a cliff near the huge Boy Scout camp near Sooke, Thursday.

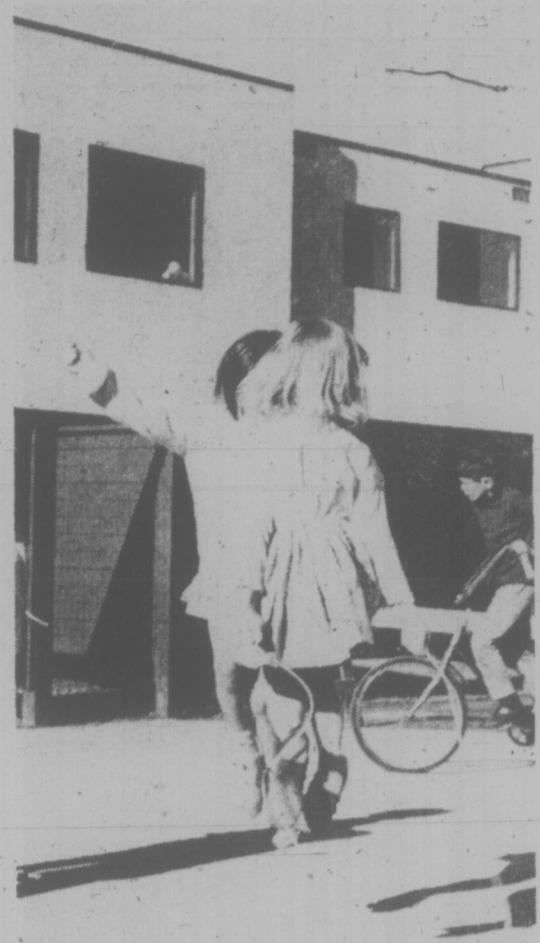

Danny Pontalle, one of 3,100 scouts attending the B.C. Yukon Jamboree at Camp Barnard, fell while hiking with his scout leader and the rest of his troop in an area of the campsite reserved for mountaineering exercises.

Camp chief Gordon Crane said a rock dislodged above the boy knocking him off the trail. He fell between 50 to 60 feet.

Crane said it was the most serious mishap since the Jamboree started Aug. 1.

It ends on Saturday.

A number of minor accidents have been reported up to now, mostly involving scrapes and bruises. One boy broke an arm, another fractured his knee cap, and a third hurt his eye when he fell and his eyeglass shattered.

Blanshard parents want more than this

Activity Centre Sought For Blanshard Area

the school land alongside Blanshard Court.

For the past two summers the council has had the use of one of the portable classrooms on the Blanshard elementary school grounds and that is where the meeting will be held at 2 p.m.

First meeting on the project was 17 months ago and the community organization was later advised to organize itself and come back to government again, said Mrs. Jordison.

So another question for Wednesday's meeting besides what help is available is how soon?

What the council wants, she said, is a building where senior citizens could meet, perhaps have tea and play cribbage, where adults can perhaps have a role in helping young people, where teenagers can go just to sit down because they're shooed off the lawns and the parking lot.

Such a building could also serve as a centre for children's activities, she suggested. At present some parents have organized small handicraft groups for children and they gather in basements.

A centre would help bring back the family-life style to the Blanshard community.

The council recommended buying an old house on nearby Dowler Place but the city seems to favor a prefab building of some kind, said Mrs. Jordison.

There has been talk of a building on the school grounds which would be available to the school by day and the community after school hours.

Right now, the teens gather in droves through the evening, racing their bikes, running, pushing she said.

"You just have to walk through there at night. It's unreal."

Pollen Hits Rezoning

A 10-suite apartment at 837 Surdett will be converted to office space despite a charge from Mayor Peter Pollen that council's approval Thursday was an "extremely retrogressive step."

"We should reject the application (for suitable zoning change) on the basis that we shouldn't encourage intrusion of residential areas by commercial buildings," Pollen told council.

"I see no demonstrated need here, except a superficial one."

Ald. Sam Bawlf, however, said he supported the zoning change because the building owners met council's stipulation that alternative accommodation at no increase in rent be found for the tenants.

"This approval doesn't mean rezoning is open to others," he said.

After council approved the zoning change Pollen threatened to invoke the mayor's prerogative of bringing the matter up for re-consideration but I can't see anything that would be gained by it."

He said he agreed with arguments voiced by an area resident who criticized the proposal by The Gay Nineties Sparerib House Ltd., owners of nearby Cherry Bank Hotel.

Donald Mitchell, 21-853 Burdett, was concerned about the construction of another office building during the housing shortage. He wanted the residential area protected from commercial buildings.

A spokesman for Gay Nineties said today all tenants have found alternative accommodation with the exception of three who are young tenants.

MAGIC TOM FINDS A FRIEND

ORANG-OUTANG Abigail appears a little apprehensive after Toronto zoo officials announced that the new Metro Zoo, although not quite ready for visitors, would hold a two-week preview for school-age children. Zoo development director Walter Gray said quite frankly he hoped there would be lots of rain to keep some of the 60,000 odd free pass holders away until the site is opened officially Aug. 15.

Brother Designs Stamp For Sister's Collection

When stamp collector Isobel M. Haywood, of 2626 Cook, bought a first-day issue—for her collection last month she had no idea she was related to one of the designers.

"I threw away the folder they gave me with the stamp," she said.

If she had read it she would have learned her brother and former Victorian Patrick Cowley-Brown was credited with the motif commemorating the 300th anniversary of the Ontario School of Agriculture.

But next day she received in the mail a card depicting two of the new stamps with her brother's autograph and a note from him saying he thought she would like to have the first one off the press.

Cowley-Brown, 33, lived in Victoria about 25 years and is a graduate of Oak Bay High School. He has been painting since his youth, taught art in Mexico while at university and following a stint as an gunner during the Second World War served as war artist with the air force. The artist lived briefly on Gabriola Island after the war.

His "wartime" paintings formed part of a B.C. Maritime Museum exhibit of west coast wartime activities a few years ago; he has exhibited landscapes at the Art Gallery of Victoria and in Washington, D.C., and done mural commissions in the East.

Cowley-Brown is employed in Ottawa by the agriculture department, where with Mary Brett and Allan McAllister he painted the stamp cover depicting agricultural education.

The senior Patrick Cowley-Brown, OBE, was in the British foreign service and en route to a posting in Australia shortly before the Second World War. He suffered a heart attack and died in Victoria, where the family remained.

'Total Woman' Idea Gains Ground in U.S.

CP staffer Doug Small took his 5½-year-old daughter Stephanie to a magic show at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa. Here's how she described it to her father.

By STEPHANIE SMALL

OTTAWA (CP) — He's not as good as a circus, but Magic Tom is good at tricks. And he has lots of them.

His best ones are ones that you can explain easily, like ones with ropes where he lets you see what he does.

Anyways, that's what I think. I am a 5½-year-old girl with orange hair, and I went to see Magic Tom with my daddy.

He did tricks with ropes, kerchiefs, poured milk into a paper bag that disappeared and put a bow tie on a little picture of a boy.

While he performed, all the kids who were supposed to be sitting on the floor jumped around, screamed out loud and told him that he was cheating.

But he wasn't. Because magicians are magic.

Magic Tom's first trick: He had three handkerchiefs that he put in a box. When he pulled them out they were three different colors. I don't know how he did it.

Then he put a glass of milk on a tray that had a red cloth around the bottom of it. He put a red tube over the glass. When he took the tube off, the glass of milk was gone.

But he turned the tray around, and I saw that the glass had gone through a hole into a holder under the tray. That wasn't a tricky one at all.

But then he did the trick again, and when he turned the tray around the glass wasn't in the holder. I don't know how he did that.

I guess it was real magic. Magic Tom also did a lot of tricks with ropes. But I don't want to tell anybody about them.

If I do, everyone will want to come and see and there won't be enough room.

I didn't see Magic Tom put anything up his sleeve, I didn't see him hiding anything and the kids he asked to help him all looked like they were fooled.

I'm sure the kids that said he was cheating were wrong.

Some people say there isn't magic. Some people say there is.

I think there is. Lots.

Magic Tom, a 47-year-old magician from Montreal, has been performing since he was 12. In addition to a daily television show, he performs for children at a Montreal restaurant, visits hospitals, and is chairman of this year's Christmas Seal campaign in his area.

After the show, Magic Tom talked briefly with Stephanie and said that he encouraged his young audiences to try to catch him out.

"I don't mind if they call me names and say it's stupid. That's when I know I've got them."

Be a good listener. Always look your best, in feminine clothes and shining hair. Tell him how great he is. Read the sports pages so you can discuss his interests intelligently. Let him make the decisions. Tell him how great he is. Advise to circa-1954 teen-age girls in frantic search of Poise, Personality and Popularity?

go now, guys. Got to see Mom's outfit for tonight."

Then, there is her wisdom on the subject of "adapting to him."

It seems that Mrs. Morgan "cried and pleaded" not to have to accompany her husband on a deep-sea fishing excursion one day, because she was too tired and he refused to go alone. "I won," she reports, "but I can tell you it wasn't worth it." She was "immersed in guilt," she explained, "and worse of all, she didn't communicate in any sense of the word for the next three days.

"Later, I apologized and he forgave me, but the hurt had to wear off. I believe I felt worse than he did and I hope I learned my lesson once and for all."

But the chief lesson she seems to have learned is always to let her husband win—because that way, he'll throw one to her now and then.

"I had nagged for a new refrigerator for years, and for years, he had refused... Now, without being nagged he was beginning to give me what I yearned for."

New Freezer.

That was in the introduction to the book. Last week, in reporting the success of Mrs. Morgan's marital techniques, Total Husband Charles Morgan, a Miami lawyer, said proudly, "I'm giving her a new freezer this week. I know she wants a freezer very badly."

It's true, he admitted, that he never uses either refrigerator or freezer, and that her earnings on the book and the $5 per student which Total Woman, Inc., gets from each $15 student fee could easily cover the price of any appliance. But, as he says, "If you've got two head coaches on one team, obviously you're going to have trouble." Besides, he finally added, "It so happens I have a client who can get it at a good price."

"I take my cues from Scripture," said Morgan, in a statement with which his wife concurs. The husband is the head of the house."

He wanted to emphasize, however, that this does not mean that he makes all the decisions. If she goes to the store in the morning, she doesn't call me to ask should we have chicken or steak for dinner. She makes decisions all day long—whether to wear the red pantsuit or the green one. But if there's a decision where there can only be one answer, if she asserts her will—it would have to be 'I go my way, you go your way,' or 'Whatever you say, dear,' and neither of those is very good for a marriage."

In separate conversations, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan stated the same philosophy of marriage in almost the same words.

They both protested that living their way may not be for everyone—"This isn't antiliberation; it isn't antianything," each said—but that it had worked for them and for an ever-expanding circle.

which began with Mrs. Morgan's friends and increased through the popularity of the book:

But they gave different explanations when asked what kind of women, in this age when the dignity and equality of feminism is a driving force, were willing to submerge their wills and become the complete dependents of men.

"I think it's women with basically happy marriages who realize that they can make them even happier and more exciting," said Morgan.

"I think there's a lot of women who realize that if they don't meet their husbands' needs, some little chick will come along and meet them, and they'll be left in the lurch," said Mrs. Morgan.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Speaking generally, when a side suit is led against a declarer's trump contract, and he cannot win the trick except by trumping, he naturally trumps the trick. But, on occasion, paradoxical though it may appear, declarer can sometimes gain a trick by not trumping; and, instead, conceding the trick to the defenders.

The latter situation developed in today's deal, which was played in the World Olympiad of 1972. The hand came up in the match between Poland and the United States. North-South vulnerability. East deals.

Declarer now found himself in a hopeless position; and when play had ended, he had gone down a trick, losing a heart, a diamond, and two clubs. And so Poland scored a game in spades at one table, while defeating the same game at the other table.

"I got this for a quarter from a kid at school," said Terry. "An old German hundred mark bill."

Tom looked. "No real value at all now, but it's worth keeping."

The boy nodded. "Sure, Dad, but he showed me a funny thing about its serial number," he declared. "If you put a 3 at each end, giving it the two extra digits, you multiply it by 61. And it's the smallest number that works that way."

What was the number?

Thanks for an idea to G. R. Cussen, Brooklyn, New York.

UVic Early Music Ticks

BY AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Without in-depth research of recent music history it would be difficult to say for sure, but the musical at UVic's MacLaurin Auditorium Thursday was probably unique.

The concert was one of three being presented this week by faculty of the Early Music Workshop currently in session at UVic.

The featured work — and a world première — was a set of 13 Preludes for 13 early instruments, written for the workshop under Canada Council commission by resident composer Rudolf Komorous.

In fact the seeming anachronism of Komorous' avant garde technique and the performance by instruments of the 16th, 17th and early 18th centuries was arresting but in no way troubling.

This was due first to the composer's sensitive use of the instruments and imaginative arrangements, the versatility of his rhythmic devices and the delicacy with which he employed the textures and limited dynamics of the ensemble.

The expertise of the performers and conductor and their pleasure in a work so different to the traditional fare were inevitably a major factor in the success of this premiere.

Even so, however, the impact on the audience would have been less positive without the explanatory slides and commentary by conductor George Corwin.

Each page of the score there were 13, one for each prelude — had been photographed and was projected on a screen behind the ensemble. These were run through Corwin before and during the performance, permitting the audience to find its way in the often graph-like maze of proportional notation.

The question of timing where down-beats are rare was emphasized by Corwin who, waving a stop-watch at the audience, remarked, "This is essential."

Players and instruments involved were Shirley Marcus, Paul Palmer and Peter Selby; recorders: Christine K. Mather, Tammy Pollet and Ruth Hibberd; krummehorns: Peggie Sampson, John Sawyer and Christine Thielmann; violins: Gordon Rowley,

LAND CLAIMS ISSUE SPLITS INDIAN GROUP

VANCOUVER (CP)

Leaders of provincial Indian organizations disagree Thursday on the issue of land claims and the Indian Act, dividing along political lines created 100 years ago in some instances.

In the final session of the annual National Indian Brotherhood Conference, British Columbia and Quebec leaders urged the assembly to seek a settlement of land claims before attempting to change the Indian Act. The issue was not resolved.

B.C. and Quebec Indians, in most cases, were not included in treaties signed 100 years ago and later with the majority of Canadian Indians. They

NAGASAKI MARKS BOMBING

TOKYO (UPI) — The people of Nagasaki today marked the 29th anniversary of the U.S. atomic attack on their city with a memorial service and a special "peace education" lesson for schoolchildren.

About 60,000 elementary and junior high school students in Nagasaki interrupted summer vacations to attend a session on the history of the bombing which took place at 11:02 a.m., Japan time Aug. 9, 1945.

The bomb, which landed off target in a suburb, killed 73,884 persons according to an estimate compiled in 1953 by Nagasaki police. U.S. military officials put the death toll at about half that.

Credit Unions Hike Consumer Loan Rates

By AL FORREST

Times Business Editor

British Columbia credit unions today boosted their interest rate on consumer loans to a range of 13.5 per cent to 15 per cent, up from a range of 11 per cent to 12 per cent.

George May, general manager of British Columbia Central Credit Union, said the upward revision was necessary because credit unions were virtually out of the mortgage business for the time being.

He said credit unions made very little on consumer loans but were not concerned while the mortgage market was brisk.

With the mortgage market almost completely dried up, credit unions have to show a profit on consumer loans to survive during the tight money period.

He stressed that each credit union sets its own rates within the range suggested by B.C. Central Credit Union. At its lowest new rate, 13.5 per cent, credit unions will be identical with banks which recently moved to the 13.4 to 13.5 range.

May said the mortgage interest rate is holding at 11.5 per cent to 12 per cent, but that was almost irrelevant. There is almost no money going out in mortgages.

The supply of funds for mortgages is tight and getting tighter," he said.

May said many credit unions have found they just break-even on consumer loans of less than $750 going out at 12 per cent, because of the high servicing cost.

The cost of servicing a loan of $750 is about the same as putting out a mortgage of $75,000. Obviously there is more profit in mortgages," May said.

Almost $1 billion of the $1.2 billion loaned out by credit unions in B.C. is in outstanding mortgages.

The shortage of credit union mortgages has been a big blow for buyers of single family homes. Two-thirds of all mortgages issued in B.C. during 1973 were by credit unions, according to statistics from the provincial land registry office.

Some credit unions still have funds available for mortgages, but this is the exception. The funds are so scarce that it does no good to shop around to other credit unions; they are supplying mortgages only to their own members, if at all.

The restrictions will last until the federal government gives a signal to increase the flow of money into mortgages.

Ottawa is not expected to do this until there are clear signs that inflation has cooled or has decided that the risk of a recession outweighs the problems of inflation.

May said there are some signs the federal tight money policy has been effective in slowing the rate of inflation and a return to the days of plentiful mortgage lending may come soon. He did not specify a date.

He warned, however, that home-buyers would have to get used to the idea of high interest mortgages. While some drop in rates might occur this fall, a return to 12 per cent mortgages is expected in 1973 and could become a new base rate.

While waiting for the Bank of Canada to increase the supply of funds for mortgages, credit unions are changing their marketing policies. Now they are only lending funds flowing in from loan repayments. Money placed on deposit is considered too volatile to lend, due to the prospect of recall.

Because they are working on narrow profit margins in consumer loans, credit unions are being advised by B.C. Central Credit Union not to engage in a bidding war for deposits. Generally, deposit rates match the current rates at banks but will not go higher in the near term.

May said credit unions simply could not afford to offer rates higher than the present levels until conditions change. When credit unions are back in the mortgage business on a large scale, the deposit rates would be reviewed.

Delay Seen On Sections Of Rent Act

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sections of the new Landlord and Tenant Act which deal with security deposits may not be included when the act is proclaimed Oct. 1, rentals said Barrie Clark said Thursday.

He said relatively minor problems will likely force the delay on sections 37 to 44 for three to four months.

No decision has been made on interim measures, said Clark, who was appointed by the provincial government to study the rental situation.

Clark told a meeting of housing assistance for residents of Kitsilano that it is impossible for the computer programmers to meet the Oct. 1 deadline.

In an interview later, he said he may ask the legislature for minor amendments to the sections before they are implemented.

Clark said he is unsure whether landlords would be allowed larger-than-normal increases because they were required by law to make improvements in their buildings.

He cited Vancouver's new fire bylaws as an example.

"I'm not prepared to automatically say it should be the tenants (who should bear the costs)," said Clark.

He said he wants to meet with Mayor Art Phillips and provincial government officials to discuss the matter.

Two men were found at 3 a.m. today clinging to the boat.

One Missing, Four Saved

When 24-ft Boat Flips

One man is missing and presumed drowned and four men were rescued after a harrowing night Thursday in storm-tossed seas on the south arm of the Fraser River when their 24-foot pleasure craft capsized.

Names of the men, all from the Vancouver area, are being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Centre in Victoria said the boat capsized at 9 p.m., two hours after leaving the mainland resort of Crescent Beach on a fishing trip.

A small fishing boat discovered the five men clinging to their overturned boat at 11:25 p.m. but was unable to stop because of heavy seas so went to Steveston and alerted authorities.

They told rescuers they had two other men were found at 8 a.m. bobbing in the chilly waters and wearing life jackets. They told of watching the missing man "go under" and presumed he had drowned.

10 NYC POLICEMEN FACE PAYOFF TRIAL

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten veteran New York City police sergeants have been indicted for participating in a "club" that collected more than $250,000 in payoffs over a decade, from both legitimate and crooked businesses, special state prosecutor Maurice H. Nadjiari's office announced Thursday.

The sergeants were arrested on charges ranging from

Only Air Canada gives you the choice of three "wide body" jets from Vancouver to Toronto, every day of the week. Two of them are non-stop, and all three take off at popular departure times.

Both the L-1011 and the 747 are magnificent aircraft, with plenty of room to relax. And our seating arrangement means even more comfort. You can enjoy your choice of music on either plane, and the 747 shows current movies* as well.

Another great feature is curbside baggage check-in at Vancouver and Toronto — you don't have to carry your bags to the counter.

So come with us. For our three "big ones". For our choice of take-off times. For your convenience. (Also L-1011 services to Calgary and Montreal). Call us, or your travel agent, for flight, car and hotel reservations. One call does it all, with Reservac II.

Long Nightmare Now Over: Ford

UN PLANE IN ISRAELI-SYRIAN BATTLE

9 Canadians Die

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Gerald Ford became the 38th president of the United States today, saying "our long national nightmare" is over and asking the nation to "let brotherly love come to our country."

Ford took the oath of office from Chief Justice Warren Burger and then in a brief, simple televised address from the East Room of the White House said he was "acutely aware" of his status as the first Chief Executive of the U.S. never to have been elected on a national ballot.

As president, he pledged, he would be what he had always been — a plain-spoken politician.

He was surrounded by old friends in congress, where he has often said he had many adversaries but no enemies.

"My fellow Americans," Ford said in reference to the scandal that caused Richard Nixon to become the first president to renounce his office, "our long national nightmare is over." Our Constitution works.

"Our great Republic is a government of laws and not of men. Here the people rule.

"But there is a higher power, by whatever name we honor Him, who ordains not only righteousness but love; not only justice but mercy.

"As we bind up the internal wounds of Watergate, more painful and more poisonous than those of foreign wars, let us restore the golden rule to our political process, and let brotherly love purge our hearts of suspicion and hate."

Ford said he was delivering "just a little straight talk among friends, and I intend it to be the first of many.

"I am acutely aware that you have not elected me your president by your ballots. So I ask that you confirm me as your president by your prayers.

"If you have not chosen me by secret ballot, neither have I gained office through secret promises.

"I have not sought this enormous responsibility, but I will not shirk it."

Signs of controversy, meanwhile, have already appeared over the choice of Ford's future vice-president, even as republicans predicted their party would benefit in November from the expected "honeymoon" with the new president.

A group of conservatives in both Houses of Congress, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, (Rep.-N.C.), launched a public drive to block the selection of former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller to the No. 2 position.

The name that headed their list of acceptable alternatives to Rockefeller, who was proposed for the job two days ago by Ford associate Melvin Laird, was that of Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Goldwater, who bested Rockefeller in the bitter 1964 Republican presidential nomination struggle, told newsmen in Phoenix earlier in the week that "no man could say no" to an invitation from Ford.

At times his voice cracked as he made his last White House speech, urging those who remained behind to do their best and assuring them that only when a man has hit the deepest valley can he realize "how magnificent it is to be on the highest mountain."

Tears streaming down his face, he said "now we look to the future."

With the president, as he received more than five minutes of applause, were Mrs. Nixon, his daughters Julie and Tricia and their husbands.

The chieftains of his shattered administration were there, too: State Secretary Henry Kissinger, Defence Secretary James Schlesinger, his Watergate lawyer James St. Clair.

Nixon and his wife walked on a red carpet from the White House to a waiting helicopter and began their journey to the California home that is the western White House no more.

One last time, as he stepped into the helicopter, the resigning president waved the two-handed V for victory sign he had flashed so many times before hundreds of political platforms.

His successor, Gerald Ford, watched the takeoff.

Triple-Murder Accused Lived in City

A 25-year-old man charged Thursday with the murder of three females in Ontario and British Columbia once lived in Victoria where he worked for a time last summer in a garage, an RCMP source said today.

Cecil Paul Gillis, whose last known address here was a Gorge Road motel, has been charged in connection with the rap-killing Sunday of a 40-year-old Toronto woman in a campsite near Midland, 120 miles north of Toronto.

Gillis is also charged with the murders of Robin Gates, 15, of Port Coquitlam, early last month, and of Barbara Joan Statt, 17, of Burnaby, in July 1973.

Both Lower mainland girls had been killed with rocks after having been sexually assaulted. They had both been hitchhiking when they were picked up by their killer.

Their deaths, and five others in the province since 1969, have been the subject of an intensive RCMP investigation in recent months.

Chief Superintendent Marvin Marcus said Gillis is not a suspect in the other killings.

"It now appears two or three other separate people are involved in the remaining unsolved slayings."

"It is frightening to think there are 500 suspects not only in B.C. but in the lower mainland of B.C. who could fit the bill."

"And it is frightening to realize we have reports of literally thousands of missing persons in our files... the number has really skyrocketed since 1969."

Marcus laid blame for the problem on the increasing incidence of young girls hitchhiking.

The chief superintendent called the arrest of Gillis "the first major breakthrough" in the police investigation.

"We can now concentrate on the remaining cases," he said.

Staff Sgt. Fred Bodnaruk of North Vancouver, head of the special investigating team, and Cpl. Ray Freeman left Wednesday for Milland to interview the accused.

Gillis, described by Marcus as a large man, 6'4", 225 lbs, and a native of Ontario apparently lived in the lower mainland for at least two years working as a beer bouncer before he came to Victoria.

Tremain said the government would have to apply for rezoning, or proceed under the land use contract, before it could build on the site.

That would mean a public hearing, he said, but he was not sure residents in the area would approve the post office's plans.

"There has been no discussion with citizens yet," Tremain added.

The administrator was surprised "the government had made no effort to contact people in the area before releasing details on the new building."

TEL AVIV — Nine Canadians were killed today when a United Nations aircraft crashed as Syrian anti-aircraft guns opened fire on Israeli planes, UN and other sources said.

Names of the dead have not been released pending notification of next-of-kin.

The Buffalo aircraft, owned by Canada, carried a crew of five and four passengers, UN officials in Jerusalem said.

The Syrian Civil Aviation Authority, which reported the crash, did not say who was responsible.

UN officials said the plane, travelling from Beirut to Damascus, crashed about 30 miles west of the Syrian capital near the Lebanese border.

They said the Canadian crew was based at Ismailia, Egypt, bailiffs for the Canadian air transport wing providing logistical support for the UN peacekeeping force in the Middle East.

Other reports described the crash site as near the international highway between Damascus and the Lebanese border post of Masnaa.

Local police said rescue teams from the Lebanese and Syrian armies rushed to the scene.

The twin-engined aircraft is one of three Buffalos used by Canadians in the Middle East.

An Ottawa spokesman said a UN ground party also was at the scene of the crash and that an investigation is under way.

It was the first time since the May 31 signing of the Syrian-Israeli troop disengagement on the Golan Heights that Syria has accused Israeli planes of infiltrating into Syrian air space.

Israeli planes did attack farming areas of South Lebanon today.

The statement said Syrian anti-aircraft batteries and "air defences" believed to mean "ground-to-air missiles" intercepted the Israeli planes as they entered Syrian airspace.

A special session called for 5 p.m. Thursday was cancelled when 289 firefighters returned to their posts after a 24-hour strike which began at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Labor Minister Bill King met union representatives and municipal mayors Thursday afternoon and when talks deadlocked the firefighters again walked out, vowing to stay out until they had a new contract or were ordered back by special legislation.

Talks began after the firemen agreed to meet negotiators under threat of a special session to compel them to return to work.

The 289 firemen from the four municipalities walked off the job at 8 a.m. PDT Wednesday to support their contract demands, but returned to work 24 hours later after the cabinet announced, following a lengthy meeting, that a special session would begin Thursday.

Today's session will be the second special sitting in B.C.'s history. The first was in 1961 when the Social Credit government took over B.C. Electric.

New Plant
'Bombshell'
—Saanich

The announcement of the federal government's intention to build a new post office mail processing plant in the Saanich Industrial Park was a "bombshell" out of the blue, Saanich municipality administrator Bill Tremain said today.

"The main reason is higher prices to farmers and higher labor costs. Sugar prices affect mainly the products with high syrup content like peaches and fruit salad."

Among vegetables, green beans and wax beans will be sharply higher in price this year because of increases paid to producers, Deacon said. Buying price is $150 a ton, up from $108 a ton last year.

Deacon said it would be at least four weeks before tins of this year's harvest have been processed and shipped from his Haney cannery to supermarkets in Vancouver and Victoria. Current stocks on food shelves represent the previous harvest year or imported produce.

As examples, he said, canneries have to pay 20 per cent more for cherries and the price for pears, has gone to $210 a ton from $175.

Canned vegetables will be up 15 to 20 per cent for most products. Pork and bean price increases should only be about 10 per cent, lowest jump on the list, because of relatively high prices for the previous year.

Deacon said these are large price increases and part of a rather frightening trend. It appears we are in for a round of large price increases every year," Deacon said.

The farmer is entitled to a fair price but these increases give the appearance of getting out of hand."

Labor costs are up 17 per cent from a year ago, another factor in production expenses.

Log Sale Role
Urged for B.C.

Substantial changes in the entire system of appraising Crown timber, including establishment of a provincial "middleman" to compete in the Vancouver log market, are recommended to the B.C. government in a lengthy report made public Thursday.

Dr. Peter Pearse, chairman of the task force which prepared the 185-page report, said establishment of a new "timber authority" is essential to the new appraisal system recommended by his task force.

The authority would participate in the Vancouver log and interior chip markets to ensure their competitiveness, he said, and to ensure the province receives the highest possible stumpage rates.

Log and chip market prices must be an accurate reflection of value because these prices are used as a basis of determining Crown timber values.

Establishment of the new authority should be accompanied, according to the report, with creation of a new independent appraisal board to review operators' grievances.

Also included in the report is an extensive series of recommendations designed, said Pearse, to ensure "a more accurate and more equitable appraisal system" and to provide incentives for proper forest utilization.

The report is the result of five-month's work by Pearse's three-man task force which was appointed in January to review B.C.'s forest policy.

Pearse told reporters he could not speculate on the changes in provincial revenues his recommendations would cause since certain changes would increase revenues, others would decrease

'Some Rock' Will Float Through Park

The lilting strains of rock music may waft this month from Beacon Hill's Cameron Bandshell.

A wary Victoria city council Thursday approved a two-day variety entertainment show including "some rock music" to be scheduled some time this month.

Ald. Alf Hood, remembering when former attempts at providing "amplified" music had stimulated complaints from residents in a 2½-mile radius around the park, hoped this year's effort would offer "muted" music.

He cautioned Ald. Malcolm Anderson to be ready—for phone calls and suggested "maybe you'd like to publicize your home phone number through the press" so complaints could be directed his way.

Anderson assured council the entertainment show, organized by Sunrise Foundation, will include some rock and some folk, "and I'll be down there. Considering they are all amateur entertainers we should try to give them every consideration."

Sunrise spokesman Jordan Hughes, 19, said today the show is not specifically aimed at young people—"but a good cross section of people that will enjoy a quality variety show."

"We're aware of the reaction that we could encounter, but as the whole thing is designed as promotion for a future coffee house, we don't want a negative response from anyone."

The foundation hopes to sponsor additional events, including a concert at Memorial Arena, to raise funds for a coffeehouse—gathering place downtown for young people.

No date has yet been set for the park concert, but Hughes expects it will take place during the next two weeks.

$7 Million Addition To Hydro Building

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A $7 million addition to the B.C. Hydro building on Pandora will be the first phase of a program to add a million square feet of office space to provincial government holdings in Victoria.

Works Minister Bill Hartley said today the program would cover the next four years and result in many government offices withdrawing from rented premises spread diversely through the capital city.

The provincial health department would occupy the renovated and enlarged Hydro building after Hydro moves to its new location at Royal Oak. Construction will begin immediately after Labor Day, Hartley said.

At present the Hydro building covers about half the block bounded by Pandora, Cormorant, Blanshard and Celia Streets. Its six storeys contain about 40,000 square feet of floor area.

The new wing to open in 1976 will have one level of un-use the 18-year-old original part of the structure during erection of the wing.

When finished, the new building will have ground-floor provision for commercial rental premises; there will be a 5,000 square foot staff cafeteria on the second floor, an "occupational health unit" to be characteristic of most new government buildings, and shredder and compactor for paper recycling—a first for government buildings in this province.

Underground parking and seven storeys of offices to provide an additional 161,000 square feet of space.

Hartley said there will be no surface parking and he would not say how many parking spaces the underground area would provide.

But he noted 1,400 persons would work in the building and the location and design will "make full use of public transit."

Cana Construction Ltd., which is doing extensive renovation of the government's Douglas building, will be "contract manager," Hartley said. Subcontractors will be invited to bid in phases, "for more competitive bids in all phases," the minister said.

He did not rule out the possibility that a general contractor would be employed on the project.

Architect Bob Siddall, of Siddall, Dennis Warner, said contractors were asked to present proposals for the structure and that of Cana Construction was chosen.

Hartley said the works department had kept the city of Victoria fully informed of plans as they developed and intends to continue to a "smooth" co-operation."

Further plans for more office space in Victoria will be announced soon, the minister said, indicating that a transit building has "high priority."

Plans for more buildings include construction and renovation within the legislative precinct outside it, particularly in the downtown core, and the government is buying some older buildings for this purpose, said Hartley. But there were difficulties, such as with the Dowell building on Wharf Street, in "making them as earthquake-proof as possible."

The new health department wing will be 86 feet high, made of reinforced concrete faced with white pre-cast concrete panels and double glazing to conserve heat and electricity. Hydro will continue to

Ask The Times

Q. I am a newcomer to the coast and live close to Dallas Road. I have noticed that, on occasion, seagulls give long shrieking sounds almost as if they are crying. Other times they give short calls that are not so piercing. Can you tell me the significance of these two different sounds? J.M.

A. Like humans, birds have individual "voices" and not enough research has been done to completely identify notes although there are several calls, and often a combination of calls made by seagulls. The world's most noted scientist on this, Prof. Niko Tinbergen of Holland has written a book The Herring Gulls' World, which you would find most informative. You can borrow it from the birds and mammals department library at the Provincial Museum.

Wayne Campbell of the department suggests the only way positive identification could eventually be established would be by carefully recording the sounds and the conditions under which they were made. After a period of study, this could lead to more accurate interpretation.

The keew or kleew call, which is often heard, is a high shrieking note used as a call by gulls. The charge call is another, used when gulls are threatened by predators.

Other calls include the trumpeting call, used as a challenge and most evident in the spring; the mew call, which is a submissive call often used by young birds who want food; the choking call, often heard at nesting time, which is a preamble to copulation; the alarm call, which is sounded when gulls are faced with something abnormal, and the begging call, often used by the female bird when she is sitting on eggs and being fed by her mate.

The purchase of the land for park purpose was timely. The last time the government established a park on Salt Spring Island was in 1937—Mount Maxwell.

Ruckle Park is also the largest park in the Gulf Islands.

The land was obtained from Gordon Ruckle, who operates a farm established in 1875 by Ruckle's Irish-born father.

Speculators sought to acquire the land, but Ruckle who doesn't believe in land speculation, refused to sell and offered the property to the provincial government.

"I'm not sorry I sold the land to the government," he said. "With time the public will appreciate more and more this park."

B.C. in No Big Rush To Develop Ruckle

By HUMPHREY DAVY.
Times Staff

White shell beaches, sandy beaches, coves, bluffs 200 feet high, meadows and woods all go to make up one of the most attractive provincial parks in the Capital Region.

The 1,200-acre Ruckle provincial park on Salt Spring Island, named after the family who formerly owned the property, was purchased for $750,000 in 1973 and represents one of the best government park buys in years.

It has 4½ miles of shoreline, an ideal area for hiking, weekend camping and picnicking.

It starts at Beaver Point, near Fulford Harbor, and takes 1½ hours to get there by car from downtown Victoria. This includes ferry time to Fulford.

While nothing has yet been done to develop the park, temporary parking areas have been established near Beaver Point and water is now available from a well, near the point.

Don Carruthers, provincial park supervisor for the Malahat Region, said an over-all park plan has yet to be prepared before trails are constructed and camping areas established.

"I don't think people realize yet what a beautiful place Ruckle Park is," he said. "We don't want any development before a proper plan is drawn up. We don't want to make mistakes."

Water Districts Holding Own

Deep Cove continues to be the only part of the Saanich Peninsula suffering watering restrictions, but other districts aren't making any promises.

"We're just holding our own," said Sidney Waterworks District secretary Bob Gibbs.

"If people go on using discretion and letting their lawns go (dry) we're hoping there won't be any restrictions."

Deep Cove Water Works District last weekend announced a ban on lawn and garden sprinkling, car washing and boat washing until further notice.

Gary Rogers, Central Saanich superintendent of public works services, said today water supply in Central Saanich is back to normal summer levels.

Shortages—several weeks ago had prompted Central Saanich to ask Victoria International Airport and the federal government's research station of East Saanich Rd. to big water users, to cut back their sprinkling.

Rescuers Geared For Derby

Marine rescue units are gearing themselves for a busy weekend, throwing all resources into service as a safeguard for the 10,000 sport fishermen who will be competing in the two-day world championship salmon derby.

The XXV Salmon Research Society of British Columbia, which is sponsoring the seventh annual derby, reports 28 volunteer patrol vessels have been mustered.

Of these, three will be assigned to the Cowichan Bay area, the others patrolling English Bay, Howe Sound and the Pender Harbor area on Saturday and Sunday.

Capt. Jack Ickringill, coast guard rescue officer in Vancouver, said today all available cutters, lifeboats, and 13-foot Zodiac inflatable rescue boats will be standing by, as well as the coast guard hovercraft that operates out of the Vancouver International Airport.

Supt. Jim Nelson of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said the patrol vessel Harvison which operates out of Sidney and the Ganges-based Sidney will be on duty.

"We would like to have more," Nelson said.

Also on duty will be the RCMP helicopter, which flies out of the Victoria International Airport.

Blanshard parents want more than this project, there is no community activity program at all.

Most of the families living at Blanshard Court have only one parent and all have low incomes. The population density is ten times that found in the average urban block.

The Blanshard Community Council is attempting to represent residents between Tolmie and Collinson, from Cook Street to the Inner Harbour. Within that area there are another 400 families—receiving assistance from the provincial human resources department.

That's the picture painted today by Mrs. Lou Jordison, a volunteer community worker and the council's secretary-treasurer.

She said the council has called a meeting for next Wednesday with representatives from the federal, provincial and city governments as well as the Greater Victoria school board.

Object of the meeting is to find out what help is available to the community to buy or build an activity centre for its people of all ages, possibly on said he supported the zoning change because the building owners met council's stipulation that alternative accommodation at no increase in rent be found for the tenants.

"This approval doesn't mean rezoning is open to others," he said.

After council approved the zoning change Pollen threatened to invoke the mayor's prerogative of bringing the matter up for re-consideration, "but I can't see anything would be gained by it."

He said he agreed with arguments voiced by an area resident who criticized the proposal by The Gay Nineties Sparerib House Ltd., owners of nearby Cherry Bank Hotel.

Donald Mitchell, 21-853 Burdett, was concerned about the construction of another office building during the housing shortage. He wanted the residential area protected from commercial buildings.

A spokesman for Gay Nineties said today all tenants have found alternative accommodation with the exception of three "who are young tenants."

After renovations the building will house Clay and Co. law offices.

Such a building could also serve as a centre for children's activities, she suggested.

At present some parents have organized small handicraft groups for children and they gather in basements.

A centre would help bring back the family-life style to the Blanshard community.

The council recommended buying an old house on nearby Dowler Place but the city seems to favor a prefab building of some kind, said Mrs. Jordison.

There has been talk of a building on the school grounds which would be available to the school by day and the community after school hours.

Right now the teens gather in droves through the evening, racing their bikes, running, pushing, she said.

Billy Tickle Dies at 79

The hearts of hundreds of Victorians were touched today by the death of William F. (Billy) Tickle.

A noted figure in the musical life of the city for almost 40 years, Billy died in his sleep at his home, 3925 Blenkinsop Road. He was 79.

Chubby, genially smiling and genuinely friendly, Billy's melodious fiddle led the trio that charmed tea drinkers in the Empress Hotel lounge for 32 years.

The other members of the trio who still live in Greater Victoria, were pianist Malcolm More and cellist Bert Botten.

These three close friends as well as professional associates, continued to play together after the Empress terminated their three-decade engagement, entertaining patients in private hospitals and on special occasions at Government House.

Funeral services will take place at Sands Funeral Home, Monday at 3:15 p.m., followed by cremation.

SCOUT KNOCKED FROM CLIFF

An 11-year-old Kelowna boy is in fair condition in the intensive care ward of Victoria General Hospital today after falling from a cliff near the huge Boy Scout camp near Sooke, Thursday.

Danny Pontale, one of 3,100 scouts attending the B.C. Yukon Jamboree, at Camp Barnard, fell while hiking with his scout leader and the rest of his troop in an area of the campsite reserved for mountain-climbing exercises.

Camp chief Gordon Crane said a rock dislodged above the boy knocking him off the trail. He fell between 50 to 60 feet.

Crane said it was the most serious mishap since the jamboree started Aug. 1.

It ends on Saturday.

A number of minor accidents have been reported up to now, mostly involving scrapes and bruises. One boy broke an arm, another fractured his knee cap, and a third hurt his eye when he fell between 50 to 60 feet.

Nixon's Tearful Goodbye

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Spinning out the last act of a shattered presidency, Richard Nixon bid a tearful, choking adieu to the men and women of his administration today before flying off to his San Clemente home in California, a private citizen.

At times his voice cracked as he made his last White House speech, urging those who remained behind to do their best and assuring them that only when a man has hit the deepest valley can he realize how magnificently it is to be on the highest mountain."

Tears streaming down his face, he said "now we look to the future."

With the president, as he received more than five minutes of applause, were Mrs. Nixon, his daughters Julie and Tricia and their husbands.

The chieftains of his shattered administration were there, too: State Secretary Henry Kissinger, Defence Secretary James Schlesinger, his Watergate lawyer James St. Clair.

Nixon and his wife walked on a red carpet from the White House to a waiting helicopter and began their journey to the California home that is the western White House no more.

One last time, as he stepped into the helicopter, the resigning president waved the two-handed V for victory sign he had flashed so many times before from hundreds of political platforms.

His successor, Gerald Ford, watched the takeoff.

Triple-Murder Accused Lived in City

A 25-year-old man charged Thursday with the murder of three females in Ontario and British Columbia once lived in Victoria where he worked for a time last summer in a garage, an RCMP source said today.

Cecil Paul Gillis, whose last known address here was a Gorge Road motel, has been charged in connection with the rape-killing Sunday of a 40-year-old Toronto woman in a campsite near Midland, 120 miles north of Toronto.

Gillis is also charged with the murders of Robin Gates, 15, of Port Coquitlam, early last month, and of Barbara Joann Statt, 17, of Burnaby, in July 1973.

Both lower mainland girls had been killed with rocks after having been sexually assaulted. They had both been hitchhiking when they were picked up by their killer.

Their deaths, and five others in the province since 1969, have been the subject of an intensive RCMP investigation in recent months.

Chief superintendent Marvin Marcus said Gillis is not a suspect in the other killings.

It now appears two or three other separate people are involved in the remaining unsolved slayings.

"It is frightening to realize we have reports of literally thousands of missing persons in our files . . . the number has really skyrocketed since 1969."

Marcus laid blame for the problem on the increasing incidence of young girls hitchhiking.

On Again Off Again House Now On Again

Firefighters are again on strike in four Lower mainland municipalities today and for the second time in two days B.C. MLAs were roused from their sleep and summoned to an emergency legislative session set for 5 p.m. today.

A special session called for 5 p.m. Thursday was cancelled when the 289 firefighters returned to their posts after a 24-hour strike which began at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Labor Minister Bill King met union representatives and municipal mayors Thursday afternoon and when talks deadlocked the firefighters again walked out, vowing to stay out until they had a new contract or were ordered back by special legislation.

Talks began after the firemen agreed to meet negotiators under threat of a special session to compel them to return to work.

The 289 firemen from the four municipalities walked off the job at 8 a.m. PDT Wednesday to support their contract demands, but returned to work 24 hours later after the cabinet announced, following a lengthy meeting, that a special session would begin Thursday.

Today's session will be the second special sitting in B.C.'s history. The first was in 1961 when the Social Credit government took over B.C. Electric.

The legislature was a hive of activity today as workers rushed to prepare the chamber for MLAs and secretaries made last-minute attempts to contact politicians who had not been reached.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said arrangements for the session began in his office at midnight Thursday when he, Highways Minister Graham Lee and Agriculture Minister David Stupich began contacting MLAs.

The decision to once again summon the politicians came earlier in the evening in a series of phone calls among cabinet members.

Price Zoom on Fruit, Vegetables in Cans

Higher production costs will force the price of processed fruits up 35 per cent and processed vegetables up 20 per cent when the new crop reaches supermarkets and department stores in September, a major B.C. cannery official said today.

The name that headed their list of acceptable alternatives to Rockefeller, who was proposed for the job two days ago by Ford associate Melvin Laird, was that of Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Goldwater, who bested Rockefeller in the bitter 1964 Republican presidential nomination struggle, told newsmen in Phoenix earlier in the week that "no man could say no" to an invitation from Ford.

The downfall of Richard Nixon was a tragedy worthy of ancient Athens, or the pen of a Shakespeare . . . See Page 5.

Ford, a homespun president who believes in homilies and God . . . Page 3.

Canned peaches, strawberries, pears and cherries will be up at least 35 per cent. Prunes, with a lower syrup content, will be up about 30 per cent.

Canned vegetables will be up 15 to 20 per cent for most products. Pork and bean prices increases should only be about 10 per cent, lowest jump on the list, because of relatively high prices for the previous crop.

The price escalation is due to a number of factors, mainly higher prices to farmers, higher wages and a sharp jump in sugar prices.

B.C. Sugar Ltd. of Vancouver raised its price for 100 pounds of sugar by $1 last Friday and another $1.75 Wednesday, pushing the new wholesale price to $39.35, up from $35.35 last August.

Deacon said the higher cost of sugar would put upward pressure on the price of all products using syrup.

However, he said the main reason for price increases is the sharply higher cost of buying products from farmers.

As examples, he said, canneries have to pay 20 per cent more for cherries and the price for pears has gone to $210 a ton from $175.

"These are large price increases and part of a rather frightening trend. It appears we are in for a round of large price increases every year," Deacon said.

The farmer is entitled to a fair price but these increases give the appearance of getting out of hand."

Labor costs are up 17 per cent from a year ago, another factor in production expenses.

Tin plate for cans is up 10 per cent and carton prices have also been increased.

"While the price of sugar is high, it is certainly not the major factor in the price increases for this year," Deacon said.

The main reason is higher prices to farmers and higher labor costs. Sugar prices affect mainly the products with high syrup content like peaches and fruit salad."

Among vegetables, green beans and wax beans will be sharply higher in price this year because of increases paid to producers, Deacon said. Buying price is $150 a ton, up from $108 a ton last year.

Deacon said it would be at least four weeks before fins of this year's harvest have been processed and shipped from his Haney cannery to supermarkets in Vancouver and Victoria. Current stocks on food shelves represent the previous harvest year—or imported produce.

New Plant 'Bombshell' —Saanich

The announcement of the federal government's intention to build a new post office mail processing plant in the Saanich Industrial Park was a "bombshell" out of the blue," Saanich municipality administrator Bill Tremayne said today.

Log Sale Role Urged for B.C.

Substantial changes in the entire system of appraising Crown timber, including establishment of a provincial "middleman" to compete in the Vancouver log market, are recommended to the B.C. government in a lengthy report made public Thursday.

Dr. Peter Pearse, chairman of the task force which prepared the 185-page report, said establishment of a new "timber authority" is essential to the new appraisal system recommended by his task force.

The authority would participate in the Vancouver log and Interior chip markets to ensure their competitiveness, he said, and to ensure the province receives the highest possible stumpage rates.

Log and chip market prices must be an accurate reflection of value because those prices are used as a basis of determining Crown timber values.

Establishment of the new authority should be accompanied, according to the report, with creation of a new independent appraisal board to review operators' grievances.

Also included in the report is an extensive series of recommendations designed, said Pearse, to ensure "a more accurate and more equitable appraisal system" and to provide incentives for proper forest utilization.

The report is the result of five-month's work by Pearse's three-man task force which was appointed in January to review B.C.'s forest policy.

Pearse told reporters he could not speculate on the changes in provincial revenues his recommendations would cause since certain changes would increase revenues, others would decrease revenues and others may affect revenues either way.

In 1973, B.C. derived $230 million in revenues from the forest industry and the timber harvested on Crown land accounts for nearly 85 per cent of the wood harvested in the province.

Three obvious recommendations which would increase

Brother Designs Stamp For Sister's Collection

When stamp collector Isobel M. Haywood, of 2626 Cook, bought a first-day issue for her collection last month she had no idea she was related to one of the designers.

"I threw away the folder they gave me with the stamp," she said.

If she had read it she would have learned her brother and former Victorian Patrick Cowley-Brown was credited with the motif commemorating the 300th anniversary of the Ontario School of Agriculture.

But next day she received in the mail a card depicting two of the new stamps with her brother's autograph and a note from him saying he thought she would like to have the first one off the press.

Cowley-Brown, 55, lived in Victoria about 25 years and is a graduate of Oak Bay High School. He has been painting since his youth, taught art in Mexico while at university and following a stint as air gunner during the Second World War served as war artist with the air force. The artist lived briefly on Gabriola Island after the war.

His wartime paintings formed part of a B.C. Maritime Museum exhibit of west coast wartime activities a few years ago; he has exhibited landscapes at the Art Gallery of Victoria and in Washington, D.C., and done mural commissions in the East.

Cowley-Brown is employed in Ottawa by the agriculture department, where with Mary Brett and Allan McAllister he painted the stamp cover depicting agricultural education.

The senior Patrick Cowley-

Brown, OBE, was in the British foreign service and en route to posting in Australia shortly before the Second World War. He suffered a heart attack and died in Victoria, where the family remained.

After the show, Magic Tom talked briefly with Stephanie and said that he encouraged his young audiences to try to catch him out.

"I don't mind if they call me names and say it's stupid. That's when I know I've got them."

MAGIC TOM FINDS A FRIEND

CP staffer Doug Small took his 5½-year-old daughter Stephanie to a magic show at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa. Here's how she described it to her father:

By STEPHANIE SMALL

OTTAWA (CP) — He's not as good as a circus, but Magic Tom is good at tricks. And he has lots of them.

His best ones are ones that you can explain easily, like ones with ropes where he lets you see what he does.

Anyway, that's what I think. I am a 5½-year-old girl with orange hair, and I went to see Magic Tom with my daddy.

He did tricks with ropes, kerchiefs, poured milk into a paper bag that disappeared and put a bow tie on a little picture of a boy.

While he performed all the kids who were supposed to be sitting on the floor jumped around, screamed out loud and told him that he was cheating.

But he wasn't. Because magicians are magic.

Magic Tom's first trick: He had three handkerchiefs that he put in a box. When he pulled them out they were three different colors. I don't know how he did it.

Then he put a glass of milk on a tray that had a red cloth around the bottom of it. He put a red tube over the glass. When he took the tube off, the glass of milk was gone.

But he turned the tray around, and I saw that the glass had gone through a hole into a holder under the tray. That wasn't a tricky one at all.

But then he did the trick again, and when he turned the tray around the glass wasn't in the holder. I don't know how he did that.

I guess it was real magic. Magic Tom did a lot of tricks with ropes. But I don't want to tell anybody about them.

If I do, everyone will want to come and see and there won't be enough room.

I didn't see Magic Tom put anything up his sleeve. I didn't see him hiding anything and the kids he asked to help him all looked like they were fooled.

I'm sure the kids that said he was cheating were wrong.

Some people say there isn't magic. Some people say there is.

I think there is. Lots.

Magic Tom, a 47-year-old magician from Montreal, has been performing since he was 12. In addition to a daily television show, he performs for children at a Montreal restaurant, visits hospitals, and is chairman of this year's Christmas Seal campaign in his area.

After the show, Magic Tom talked briefly with Stephanie and said that he encouraged his young audiences to try to catch him out.

"I don't mind if they call me names and say it's stupid. That's when I know I've got them."

'Total Woman' Idea Gains Ground in U.S.

go now, guys. Got to see Mom's outfit for tonight."

Then there is her wisdom on the subject of "adapting to him."

It seems that Mrs. Morgan "cried and pleaded" not to have to accompany her husband on a deep-sea fishing excursion one day, because she was too tired and he refused to go alone. "I won," she reports, "but I can tell you it wasn't worth it." She was "immersed in guilt," she explained, and "worse of all, she didn't communicate in any sense of the word for the next three days."

"Later, I apologized and he forgave me, but the hurt had to wear off. I believe I felt worse than he did and I hope I learned my lesson once and for all."

But the chief lesson she seems to have learned is always to let her husband win because that way, he'll throw one to her now and then.

"I had nagged for a new refrigerator for years, and for years, he had refused . . . Now, without being nagged, he was beginning to give me what I yearned for."

New Freezer

That was in the introduction to the book. Last week, in reporting the success of Mrs. Morgan's marital techniques, Total Husband Charles Morgan, a Miami lawyer, said proudly, "I'm giving her a new freezer this week. I know she wants a freezer very badly."

It's true, he admitted, that he never uses either refrigerator or freezer, and that her earnings on the book and the $5 per student which Total Woman, Inc., gets from each $15 student fee could easily cover the price of any appliance. But, as he says, "If you've got two head coaches on one team, obviously you're going to have trouble." Besides, he finally added, "It so

"I take my cues from Scripture," said Morgan, in a statement with which his wife concurs. The husband is the head of the house."

He wanted to emphasize, however, that this does not mean that he makes all the decisions. If she goes to the store in the morning, she doesn't call me to ask should we have chicken or steak for dinner. She makes decisions all day long—whether to wear the red pantsuit or the green one. But if there's a decision where there can only be one answer, if she asserts her will it would have to be. "I go my way, you go your way," or "Whatever you say, dear," and neither of those is very good for a marriage."

In separate conversations Mr. and Mrs. Morgan stated the same philosophy of marriage in almost the same words.

They both protested that living their way may not be for everyone. "This isn't antiliberation; it isn't antianthing," each said—but that it had worked for them and for an ever-expanding circle which began with Mrs. Morgan's friends and increased through the popularity of the book.

But they gave different explanations when asked what kind of women, in this age when the dignity and equality of feminism is a driving force, were willing to submerge their wills and become the complete dependents of men.

"I think it's women with basically happy marriages who realize that they can make them even happier and more exciting," said Morgan.

"I think there're a lot of women who realize that if they don't meet their husbands' needs, some little chick will come along and meet them, and they'll be left in the lurch," said Mrs. Morgan.

WASHINGTON — Gerald Ford became the 38th president of the United States today, saying "our long national nightmare" is over and asking the nation to "let brotherly love come to our country."

WASHINGTON — Spinning out the last act of a shattered presidency, Richard Nixon bid a tearful, choking adieu to the men and women of his administration today before flying off to his San Clemente home in California, a private citizen.

At times his voice cracked as he made his last White House speech, urging those who remained behind to do their best and assuring them that only when a man has hit the deepest valley can he realize "how magnificent it is to be on the highest mountain."

Tears streaming down his face, he said "now we look to the future."

With the president, as he received more than five minutes of applause, were Mrs. Nixon, his daughters Julie and Tricia, and their husbands.

The chieftains of his shattered administration were there, too: State Secretary Henry Kissinger, Defence Secretary James Schlesinger, his Watergate lawyer James St. Clair.

Nixon and his wife walked on a red carpet from the White House to a waiting helicopter and began their journey to the California home that is the western White House no more.

One last time, as he stepped into the helicopter, the resigning president waved the two-handed V for victory sign he had flashed so many times before from hundreds of political platforms.

His successor, Gerald Ford, watched the takeoff.

Price Zoom on Fruit, Vegetables in Cans

Higher production costs will force the price of processed fruits up 35 per cent and processed vegetables up 20 per cent when the new crop reaches supermarkets and department stores in September, a major B.C. cannery official said today.

W. S. Deacon, president of Berryland Canning Ltd., largest food processor in western Canada, said consumers can expect the following price increases within four weeks:

Canned peaches, strawberries, pears and cherries will be up at least 35 per cent. Prunes, with a lower syrup content, will be up about 30 per cent.

Canned vegetables will be up 15 to 20 per cent for most products. Pork and bean price increases should only be about 10 per cent, lowest jump on the list, because of relatively high prices for the previous crop.

The price escalation is due to a number of factors, mainly higher prices to farmers, higher wages and a sharp jump in sugar prices.

Deacon said holding at about 1973 prices is "strawberries" will be sharply higher in price this year because of increases paid to producers. Deacon said. Buying price is $150 a ton, up from $108 a ton last August.

Deacon said the highest cost of sugar would put upward pressure on the price of all products using syrup.

However, he said the main reason for price increases is the sharply higher cost of buying products from farmers.

As examples, he said, canneries have to pay 20 per cent more for cherries and the price for pears has gone up from $210 a ton from $175.

These are large price increases and part of a rather frightening trend. It appears we are in for a round of large price increases every year," Deacon said.

The farmer is entitled to a fair price but these increases give the appearance of getting out of hand."

Labour costs are up 17 per cent from a year ago, another factor in production expenses.

Tin plate for cans is up 10

per cent and carton prices have also been increased.

"While the price of sugar is high, it is certainly not the major factor in the price increases for this year," Deacon said.

The main reason is higher prices to farmers and higher labor costs. Sugar prices affect mainly the products with high syrup content like peaches and fruit salad."

Among vegetables, green beans and wax beans will be sharply higher in price this year because of increases paid to producers. Deacon said. Buying price is $150 a ton, up from $108 a ton last year.

Deacon said it would be at least four weeks before tins of this year's harvest have been processed and shipped from his Haney cannery to supermarkets in Vancouver and Victoria. Current stocks of food shelves represent the previous harvest year or imported produce.

One product holding at about 1973 prices is strawberries which the cannery 1969, have been the subject of an intensive RCMP investigation in recent months.

Chief superintendent Marvin Marcus said Gillis is not a suspect in the other killings.

It now appears two or three other separate people are involved in the remaining unsolved slayings.

"It is frightening to think there are 500 suspects not only in B.C. but in the lower mainland for at least two years working as a bear parlor bouncer before he came to Victoria."

"And it is frightening to realize we have reports of literally thousands of missing persons in our files... the number has really skyrocketed since 1969."

Marcus laid blame for the problem on the increasing incidence of young girls hitchhiking.

The chief superintendent called the arrest of Gillis "the first major breakthrough" in the police investigation.

"We can now concentrate on the remaining cases," he said.

Staff Sgt. Fred Bodnaruk of North Vancouver, head of the special investigating team, and Cpl. Ray Freeman left Wednesday for Milland for interview the accused.

Gillis, described by Marcus as a large man, 6'4", 225 lbs, and a native of Ontario apparently lived in the lower mainland for at least two years working as a bear parlor bouncer before he came to Victoria.

TEL AVIV — Nine Canadians were killed today when a United Nations aircraft was shot down by a Syrian missile, UN and other sources said.

Names of the dead have not been released pending notification of next-of-kin.

The Buffalo aircraft, owned by Canada, carried a crew of five and four passengers, UN officials in Jerusalem said.

The Syrian Civil Aviation Authority, which reported the crash, did not say who was responsible.

UN officials said the plane, travelling from Beirut to Damascus, crashed about 30 miles west of the Syrian capital near the Lebanese border.

They said the Canadian crew was based at Ismailia, Egypt, headquarters for the Canadian air transport wing providing logistical support for the UN peacekeeping force in the Middle East.

Other reports described the crash site as near the international highway between Damascus and the Lebanese border post of Masnaa.

Local police said rescue teams from the Lebanese and Syrian armies, rushed to the scene.

The twin-engined aircraft is one of three Buffalos used by Canadians in the Middle East.

An Ottawa spokesman said a ground party also was at the scene of the crash and that an investigation is under way.

All That Glitters...

Is not gold, as Carol Baker discovers in the role of the gold-digging actress Rina Marlon in the film adaptation of Harold Robbins' The Carpetbaggers, a story of industrial intrigue and Hollywood of the 'golden 30s', to be telecast on Monday at 9 p.m. on Channel 4. In the above scene, Rina startles guests at a banquet when she leaps from table to chandelier, and practically kills herself, in an attempt to gain attention and publicity.

Movies

Dragonwyck (xx), on 13 at 1. A 1946 "house of horrors" thriller starring Gene Tierney, Vincent Price and Walter Huston.

Snow White and the Three Stooges (x), on 11 at 2. An exciting skating performance by former Olympic champion Carol Heiss highlights this otherwise routine 1961 Three Stooges comedy.

The Ghost and Mr. Chicken (x), on 7 at 2:30. Don Knotts plays a timid reporter who volunteers to spend the night in a supposedly haunted mansion in this 1965 comedy.

Seven Cities of Gold (xx), on 5 at 3. A 1955 costume adventure about the Spanish Conquistadors' 18th century search for the legendary "7 cities of gold," starring Anthony Quinn, Richard Egan and Michael Rennie.

Elizabeth the Queen (xxx), on 13 at 3. A good script and excellent performances by Bette Davis and Errol Flynn give this 1939 drama about the romance between Elizabeth I of England and Lord Essex an air of believability.

Monkey Business (xxxx), on 11 at 4. A 1931 Marx Brothers comedy classic that finds Groucho, Chico, Harpo and Zeppo as stowaways on a ship and causing their usual amount of trouble. Great comedy is never dated and even Groucho's depression pung will always make you laugh.

Night Games, on 5 at 8. This 1974 TV movie spawned the upcoming fall series Petrelli, starring Barry Newman as a big-city lawyer who comes to practice in a small town. This pilot has him defending a socialist accused of murdering her husband. Supporting cast includes Susan Howard, Albert Salmi and Stephanie Powers.

Houston, We've Got a Problem (xx), on 8 at 9:30. Robert Culp, Gary Collins and Sandra Dee star in this fictionalized 1974 account of the flight of the ill-fated Apollo 13. The plot concentrates on the effects that an explosion aboard the spacecraft has on the lives of the earth-bound flight controllers.

Trapped in Tangiers, on 11 at 10. No rating available on this 1958 Italian-made action adventure starring Edmund Purdom and Genevieve Page. The Christmas Tree (xx), on 7 at 11. A 1969 drama about a father's attempts to make the last days happy for his son, who is dying of leukemia. Filmed in France and starring William Holden and Virna Lisi.

Splendor in the Grass (xxx), on 12 at 11. An absorbing 1961 film adaptation of playwright William Inge's Oscar-winning story, directed by Elia Kazan. Natalie Wood and Warren Beatty are excellent sweet story of an affair between an aging showgirl, waiting for her married lover to divorce his wife, and a nightclub pianist who squanders his earnings at the gambling tables.

Flight to Mars, on 10 at 9. No information, cast or rating available on this film.

Movin' On, on 5 at 9:30. Claude Atkins and Frank Converse star in this 1974 pilot for a fall series, about the relationship between a tough veteran trucker and his young, college-educated partner. This episode has the team trying to get a load of oranges past a violent group of citrus growers, who are determined to sabotage the delivery.

Filmed in France and starring William Holden and Virna Lisi.

Splendor in the Grass (xxx), on 12 at 11 p.m. as the two young people making the painful and beautiful discovery of love in a small Kansas town prior to the depression of the thirties. Their sensitive performances, along with good ones by Pat Hingle, Zohra Lampert and Audrey Christie, make this film a must for drama fans who are not above shedding a tear or two.

Neutron vs. the Amazing

(xxx), on 6 at 11:15. (See earlier for details of this movie.) I Saw What You Did (xx), on 2 at 11:30. Joan Crawford and John Ireland star in this 1965 suspense drama about a couple of teen-age girls who play a telephone prank which upsets a murderer and makes them candidates for his next crime.

Between Heaven and Hell (xx), on 4 at 11:45. Robert Wagner, Broderick Crawford and Terry Moore star in this hard-hitting 1956 story of the fighting men in the Pacific during the Second World War. I Never Sang for My Father (xxxx), on 8 at midnight. Superb performances by Melvyn Douglas, Gene Hackman and Estelle Parsons highlight this 1970 film adaptation of Robert Anderson's moving story about family relationships.

To Sir, With Love (xxxx), on 8 at 1:45. A good-humored, touching 1967 British-made story of an idealistic, young ex-engineer and his experiences in teaching a group of rambunctious high school students from the slums of London's East End. Sidney Poitier is excellent in this appealing film based on the novel of E. R. Braithwaite and skillfully produced, adapted and directed by James Clavell. Worth staying up for.

Hollywood Television Theatre

Martha Scott (left) and Eileen Herlie star in Lemonade, the second of two dramas to be telecast on Channel 9's Hollywood Television Theatre on Saturday at 9:30 p.m. They portray two lonely Southern California matrons who set up competing lemonade stands along a highway jammed with holiday traffic. The opening drama, entitled, The Police, is a political satire about a country in which the last revolutionary has capitulated leaving the police with no one to police.

TV GETS ANOTHER LAWYER—In the tradition of Humphrey Bogart, Barry Newman (above) is TV's newest lawyer, portraying a cocky and abrasive New Yorker who moves his practice to a small town in the upcoming fall series; Petrocelli. The pilot that spawned the series, Night Games, will be telecast on Saturday at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

In The “Bogie” Tradition

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES — In his new television series, Petrocelli, Barry Newman plays a fish out of water. A barracuda.

Tony Petrocelli moves his law practice from New York to a southwestern United States cattletown in the show. His abrasive, cocky, unorthodox ways sometimes clash with the townspeople's easy-going manner.

It is a switch on McCloud, where the New Mexico marshal's folksy ways jolt the New York City police.

Newman, 36 and single, is in the tradition of Humphrey Bogart, James Cagney and Spencer Tracy — he is not handsome but does bring plenty of magnetism, charm and sex appeal to the screen.

He has a ragged scar along the corner of his left eye. He has resisted all suggestions to have his large nose fixed.

Newman landed his first movie role in 1970 when producer Sidney J. Furie went East looking for a "New York face" for the film, The Lawyer.

At the time Newman was in an off-Broadway production and had just completed a two-year run in the soap opera, The Edge of Night.

Furie wrote The Lawyer with Harold Buchman and it was the genesis of Petrocelli. It was loosely based on F. Lee Bailey's defense in the Sam Sheppard case.

Newman said the audience may resent Tony Petrocelli at first.

"He's not apple pie, he's not Mr. Humble," he said. "He's the Muhammad Ali of the law."

Movies

Snake Pit (xxx), on 13 at 2. An excellent 1948 film adaptation of the best-selling novel about life in an overcrowded mental hospital, highlighted by a fine performance by Olivia de Havilland. Slightly dated in the methods of treatment shown and definitely not for the squeamish.

In Broad Daylight (xx), on 8 at 2:30 and 6 at 4. Richard Boone, Suzanne Pleshette and Stella Stevens star in this 1971 made-for-TV crime-drama about a blind ex-matinee idol who plots to kill his wife.

Missile Monsters (x), on 11 at 2:30. A 1950 sci-fi effort based on the serial, Flying Disc Men from Mars.

Smiley (xx), on 5 at 3:30. The youngsters will enjoy this 1956 Englishmade drama about a small boy in Australia's bush country and his efforts to raise money for a bicycle. Ralph Richardson and Chips Rafferty star.

To Kill a Mockingbird (xxxx), on 7 at 3:30. Gregory Peck and scriptwriter Horton Foote won Oscars for this superb 1962 film adaptation of Harper Lee's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, combining rational prejudice in the American South with the maturing of two youngsters (beautifully played by Mary Badham and Phillip Alford). In its own quiet way, this is one of the best movies dealing with race relations that the American film industry has ever made. Recommended.

Dance, Little Lady (xx), on 12 at 8:30. Mai Zetterling and Terence Morgan star in this 1954 English-made drama about a ballerina whose career is halted by an accident, but sees her daughter take up where she left off. Well-produced with good performances from the cast.

Lawless Frontier, on 11 at 4. A typical, two-fisted 1935 John Wayne Western.

Chain Lightning (xx), on 13 at 4. Exciting aerial photography highlights this 1950 air-force drama starring Humphrey Bogart, Eleanor Parker and Raymond Massey.

Falcon of the Desert, on 13 at 6. No rating, description or cast available on this movie.

The Italian Job (xx), on 4 at 8:30. Some great stunt driving and beautiful European scenery highlights this 1969 tongue-in-cheek crime-drama starring Michael Caine, Noel Coward and Benny Hill.

Between Friends, on 2 and 6 at 9. An unpreviewed television premiere of a 1973 Canaon 12 at 9 p.m.

dian-made film by award-winning director Don Shebib (Goin' Down the Road). Filmed in Toronto and Sudbury, the plot revolves around five misfits who plan and execute a robbery that's doomed to failure. The cast includes Michael Parks (of TV's Bronson series) and Bonnie Bedelia.

North By Northwest (xxxx), on 12 at 9. An adroit blend of laughter and excitement directed by that master of suspense Alfred Hitchcock, who apparently had lots of fun with this tongue-in-cheek spy thriller. Filmed in 1959, it stars Cary Grant, suave as ever, as a man who becomes entangled with foreign agents chasing him from New York to the top of Mount Rushmore. Eva Marie Saint is excellent as Grant's leading lady and an excellent supporting cast includes James Mason, Leo G. Carroll and Martin Landau. Recommended.

Way of a Gaucho (xx), on 4 at 11:30. Love, jealousy and murder are thrown into this uneven but interesting 1952 tale of the people who lived in the untamed Argentine territory during the end of the 19th century. Cast includes Rory Calhoun, Richard Boone and Gene Tierney.

Otley (xxx), on 7 at 11:30. An engaging 1960 British-made secret-agent spoof featuring an attractive cast that includes Tom Courtenay, Romy Schneider and Fiona Lewis. Courtenay plays an affable drifter who picks up women and various inanimate objects that don't belong to him, and it's a pleasure to see him in this light role.

Dracula Has Risen from the Grave (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Thriller fans will enjoy this 1968 British-made vampire tale with English horror star Christopher Lee.

Thunder in the City, on 2 at 11:40. No rating available on this 1937 English-made comedy starring Edward G. Robinson as an American con artist in London promoting an African gold mine.

Gunsmoke in Tucson (x), on 5 at midnight. Routine 1958 western starring Mark Stevens and Gale Robbins.

To Sir, With Love (xxxx), on 6 at 1:30. A good-humored, touching 1967 British-made story of an idealistic, young ex-engineer and his experiences in teaching a group of rambunctious high school students from the slums of London's East End. Sidney Poitier is excellent in this appealing film based on the novel of E.R. Braithwaite and skillfully produced, adapted and directed by James Clavell. Worth staying up for.

Today's Highlights

Sunday Best, on 2 at 4:30. St. Demetrios Rides a Red Horse, a profile of veteran diplomat James George during his last eight weeks as Canadian High Commissioner to India. First aired in August, 1973, the program shows him in conference with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi; visiting the Taj Mahal; and relaxing with his family and friends before assuming his new post as Ambassador to Iran. (60 mins.)

Music to See, on 2 at 5:30. A recital of chamber music with the Czech String Quartet of Hamilton, Ontario. (30 mins.)

An Act of Love, on 5 at 5:30. A repeat telecast of an Emmy-winning documentary filmed at a camp for handicapped children on Sunset Lake near Mount Rainier. The camp receives no U.S. government funds, but operates entirely on donated equipment, money and time. Last year, 395 campers participated, including victims of multiple sclerosis, cystic fibrosis and bone disease and, for many, it was the first experience in the woods. (30 mins.)

CBS News Special, on 7 and 12 at 6. The Trouble with Rock, a report investigating charges of corruption and scandal in the rock-music industry. Among those interviewed are industry executives, record promoters and disc jockeys. (60 mins.)

National Geographic Special, on 4 at 6:30. Orson Welles narrates this 1965 documentary about chimpanzee research in Tanzania, conducted by zoologist Jane Goodall. (60 mins.)

Evening at Pops, on 9 at 8. Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops perform the music of George Gershwin with guest pianist Earl Wild. (60 mins.)

Columbus, on 5 at 8:30. A repeat telecast of Any Old Port in a Storm, about a snobbish winemaker who murders his brother in a quarrel over the selling of their vineyards. Peter Falk stars and an excellent guest cast includes Donald Pleasence and Julie Harris. (2 hrs.)

Masterpiece Theatre, on 9 at 9. Part 2 of Clouds of Witness finds Lord Peter Wimsey (Ian Carmichael) on the trail of a mysterious motocyclist. (60 mins.)

Primitive Man, on 8 at 10. The Tribe That Flew the World, a documentary study of Sumatra's Orang Kubus. Living hidden in the lush tropical forests of the island's interior, these nomadic people are said to be descended from islanders who retreated into the jungle rather than submit to a series of invasions from the 14th to 18th centuries. (60 mins.)

Firing Line, on 8 at 10. Host William Buckley Jr. talks with Joseph McGuinness, author of The Selling of the President; and Murray Kempton, syndicated columnist. (60 mins.)

Great Mysteries, on 7 at 10:30. Cyril Cusack stars in The Monkey's Paw, the classic chiller about a cursed charm that inflicts a grim lesson on a family attempting to tamper with fate. Orson Welles is host. (30 mins.)

Evening At Pops

It's a red-letter night on 'Evening at Pops' when Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra present a program of Gershwin hits on Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channel 9. Highlighting the hour is a virtuoso performance by guest pianist Earl Wild, (left) playing Gershwin's Concerto in F. It's an energetic piece, romantic and triumphant, and filled with some of the most beautiful melodies that sweep everybody up, even those who insist they don't care for classical music. Tonight's program is one of the best in the series.

on Channel 2 and 6. It's the story of five people who plan a robbery doomed to failure, and was directed in Sudbury and Toronto by award-winner Don Shebib.

Sunday Supplement Summer Specials

Forsaking its usual mixed-bag of views and reviews of the arts, CBC Radio's Sunday Supplement will air several hour-long specials over the next few weeks. Supplement, hosted by Jim Robertson, is broadcast Sundays at 10:00 a.m.

On August 11, the series will repeat a program devoted to the late Duke Ellington, originally broadcast on CBC Tuesday Night in 1967. It was aired again as a tribute to the great music master after his death on May 24, at the age of 75. The late broadcaster Byng Whitteker talked to the Duke during a rehearsal break. He is heard reminiscing about his spectacular career, and playing some early compositions.

Two former residents of western Ontario get together on August 18 for an informal chat about their home territory and how it shows up in their writing. Harry Boyle, a former CBC Radio broadcaster and now a member of the CRTC, has written several books about his boyhood on a farm near Goderich including Mostly in Clover and Homebrew and Patches. He talks to Alice Munro, author of Lives of Girls and Women and Something I've Been Meaning to Tell You. Miss Munro will be writer-in-residence this fall.

at the University of Western Ontario in London.

August 25, freelance broadcaster Patrick Hyman presents a profile in sound of Virgil Thomson, the American author, music critic, essayist, conductor, concert pianist, organist, choir director, and teacher. Thomson talks about his life and work over the past 50 years. He's now 77.

A couple of Spanish Civil War veterans exchange stories about their experiences on September 1. They are Canadian authors Hugh Garner and Ted Allen. Allen has lived in London for 20 years where he has enjoyed success as a writer for stage, radio, TV and films. His play, My Sister's Keeper, is being staged at Festival Lennoxville, Quebec, this summer.

Movies

RAYMOND BURR
... on 11 at 8 p.m.

The Bottom of the Bottle (xx), on 7 at 3:30. An exciting climax highlights this 1956 melodrama about an escaped convict who invades his brother's house and family demanding help and money. A competent cast includes Ivan Johnson, Joseph Cotten, Ruth Roman and Jack Carson.

Five Fingers (xxxx), on 5 at 3:30. A superb, 1952 film, suspenseful and engrossing, in the class of The 39 Steps and Saboteur, about the incredible deeds of a daring real-life espionage agent, flawlessly portrayed by James Mason. Recommended.

What Happened at Campo Grande (xx), on 12 at 7. A zany 1967 English-made-comedy about the madcap antics of two salesmen involved in a South American Revolution, starring Eric Morehouse and Ernie Wise.

Desire in the Dust (xx), on 11 at 8. Raymond Burr rises above a poor script and gives an interesting portrayal of a tyrannical Southern landowner with plenty of skeletons in his closet who sees his political ambitions in jeopardy, and tries unscrupulous means to rid himself of his troubles. It's a dose of lust and desire in a small town, but it's a long way from Faulkner. Filmed in 1960 with a competent supporting cast that includes Martha Hyer and Joan Bennett.

The Carpetbaggers (xx), on 4 at 9. A 1964 film rendering of Harold Robbins' best-seller that traces the fortunes of Jonas Cord, Jr., a millionaire industrialist, movieaker and cold-hearted opportunist. Cast includes George Peppard, Carroll Baker and Alan Ladd in his last film role.

Miracle in the Rain (xx), on 13 at 11:30. A sentimental 1956 melodrama starring Jane Wyman and Van Johnson as two lonely people who meet and fall in love during the Second World War. The two stars do well, but they are almost upstaged by an excellent performance by Eileen Heckart as Miss Wyman's friend.

Dracula Has Risen from the Grave (xx), on 7 at 11:45. Thriller fans will enjoy this 1968 English-made horror effort starring Christopher Lee as the Transylvanian vampire.

Quinacron, Frontier Scout (xx), on 2 at midnight. Tony Martin looks very uncomfortable without a tuxedo in this 1956 western that finds him playing an ex-Army officer trying to uncover a missing gun shipment.

In Cold Blood (xxxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. Writer-producer-director Richard Brooks' skillful, 1967 film adaptation of Truman Capote's searing novel about two young ex-cons who slaughtered a Kansas farmer and his family (the Clutters in 1959). Gripping scenes, played in stark documentary style (with non-professional actors portraying the killers) build up to the actual murders. This is obviously not for the squeamish or children, but if you can take it, you'll be rewarded with an unforgettable re-enactment of a real-life incident, horrifying as it was.

JAMES MASON
... on 5 at 3:30 p.m.

Professional actors in the cast include John Forsythe, Paul Stewart and Gerald O'Loughlin.

The Americano (xx), on 13 at noon. Glenn Ford plays a Texas cowboy who gets mixed up with bandits in Brazil in this 1954 western, filmed below the equator.

Pray for the Wildcats, on 6 and 8 at 12:45. No rating available on this 1974 TV-drama about a sadistic advertising-agency client who forces three agency employees to accompany him on a desert motorcycle trip. Cast includes Andy Griffith, William Shatner and Robert Reed.

Young Guns of Texas (xx), on 11 at 12:35. Routine 1962 western highlighted by an interesting cast that includes the teen-age offspring of Robert Mitchum (James), Alan Ladd (Alana) and Joel McCrea (Jody).

Five Fingers (xxxx), on 5 at 3:30. A superb, 1952 film, suspenseful and engrossing, in the class of The 39 Steps and Saboteur, about the incredible deeds of a daring real-life espionage agent, flawlessly portrayed by James Mason. Recommended.

Today's Highlights

Not for Women Only, on 4 at 9:30. Barbara Walters' topic this week is "How to Buy Art" (30 mins.)

Merv Griffin, on 4 at 10. Guest host Bill Cosby welcomes Lyle Waggoner (The Carol Burnett Show) and Jo Anne Worley (Laugh-In). (90 mins.)

Pilot Film, on 8 at 7. The Owl and the Pussycat, a comedy pilot (based on the film which starred Barbra Streisand) about a suicidal intellectual who is jolted out of his self-pitying mood by a madcap actress with a zest for life. Cast includes Buck Henry and Bernadette Peters. (30 mins.)

Contetti Days and Pepperoni Nights, on 4 at 7:30. A visual celebration of summer in Seattle, filmed by Emmy award-winning cinematographer Willard Hatch. (30 mins.)

Wild World of Animals, on 7 at 7:30. The Seals of the Atlantic explores the controversy centering on Britain's gay seal population, which consumes large quantities of fish that are used in human diets. Arguments for and against killing a limited number of the animals are presented. William Conrad (Cannon) is the host. (30 mins.)

Oscar Peterson Presents, on 8 at 7:30. In the spotlight tonight, the Oscar Peterson Trio, with Niels Henning Pedersen on bass and Louis Bellson on drums. (30 mins.)

Day at Night, on 9 at 7:30. Host James Day talks with Margaret Truman Daniel, who comments on her life as a President's daughter and talks about her book, Harry S. Truman. (30 mins.)

Pro Tennis, on 9 at 8. Four hours of coverage of the men's singles final in the U.S. Open Clay Courts Championships from Indianapolis. (4 hrs.)

The Commanders, on 12 at 9:30. A profile of Isoroku Yamamoto, commander in chief of the Japanese combined fleet at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor. His story is told through interviews with his son, fellow officers and associates. For historical background, the program includes archival film footage from the Russo-Japanese War in 1905 and from turn-of-the-century Japan. (60 mins.)

Engelbert Humperdinck in Bermuda, on 7 at 10. A musical tour of Bermuda with the English singer and his guests, Anne Murray and the Clayhouse Steel Band. (60 mins.)

Romantic Rebellion, on 2 and 6 at 10:30. In the conclusion of his two-part study of J. M. W. Turner (1775-1851), host Kenneth Clark focuses on the painter's rediscovery of color and its influence on modern painting. (30 mins.)

As It Is, on 8 at 10:30. A report on the recent problems faced in the development of the new hydroelectric project. (30 mins.)

DAY AT NIGHT THIS WEEK—Three interesting interviews are featured on Channel 9's Day at Night series, hosted by James Day and telecast each week-night at 10:30 p.m. On Monday, Margaret Truman Daniel (left) will be Day's guest; on Tuesday, he talks with TV producer Norman Lear (centre) and on Wednesday, a rare interview with Ginger Rogers (right) who talks candidly about her career in the movies.

THE OWL AND THE PUSSYCAT — A pilot for a TV comedy series (based on the Barbra Streisand movie) will be telecast on Monday at 7 p.m. on Channel 8. The film stars Buck Henry (as Felix Sherman) and popular singer-actress Bernadette

Peters (as Doris Worthington) who singly are a couple of life's losers—but together they become a hilarious pair of madcap nomads in search of romance and success.

MUSIC-HALL star Tessie O'Shea adds a cheery note to the happy atmosphere at the Pig and Whistle, to be telecast on Monday at 10 p.m. on Channel 8.

Movies

Belle Starr (xx), on 13 at noon. Gene Tierney, Randolph Scott and Dana Andrews star in this 1941 western about a female Jesse James.

The Ambushers (x), on 8 and 8 at 12:45. The first two of Dean Martin's Matt Helm epics were The Silencers and Murders' Row, and this 1967 effort is the worst of the lot, with the usual amount of fist fights and a number of pretty girls, including Senta Berger. As a super-agent, Dean's a better crooner.

Blue Denim (xx), on 11 at 1. Considered controversial when first released, this 1959 melodrama about teenage sweethearts and their problems is old hat by today's standards. The late Brandon de Wilde (Shane) and Carol Lynley star.

Serenade (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Great singing highlights this otherwise routine 1956 musical starring Mario Lanza as a street singer who is discovered by a society playgirl (Joan Fontaine) and a concert manager (Vincent Price).

Stagecoach (xxx), on 7 at

on 4 at 8 p.m.

3:30. (Part 1). An all-star 1966 re-make of the classic John Ford western about a group of assorted stagecoach passengers travelling through hostile Indian country and their reactions under stress. The Ford version was better but the action is still pretty good the second time around. Cast includes Ann-Margret, Alex Cord, Bing Crosby and Red Buttons. (Conclusion tomorrow, same time and channel.)

Pray for the Wildcats, on 4 at 8. No rating available on this 1974 TV drama about a sadistic advertising agency client who forces three agency employees to accompany him on a dangerous desert motorcycle trip. Cast includes Andy Griffith, William Shatner, Robert Reed, Marjoe Gortner and Angie Dickinson.

Seven Thieves (xxx), on 11 at 8. High-gear suspense and fine performances by Edward G. Robinson, Rod Steiger, Eli Wallach and Joan Collins highlight this 1960 crime-drama about an ingenious plot to rob the Monte Carlo gambling vaults.

Penny Serenade (xxx), on 13 at 8. Cary Grant and Irene Dunne star in this well-made 1941 emotional drama about a childless couple who adopt a child — with tragic results.

Sign It Death, on 4 at 11:30. A wide world TV mystery about a beautiful woman who discovers a sure way to get what she wants — kill those who stand in the way. Francesca Annis stars.

Murder Ahoy (xx), on 12 at 11:30. This 1964 English-made mystery finds the intrepid Miss Marple (played to perfection by the late Margaret Rutherford) aboard a naval training ship plagued by a series of violent murders.

Miracle in the Rain (xx), on 7 at 11:45. A sentimental 1956 romantic drama about two lonely people who meet and fall in love during the Second World War. Jane Wyman and Van Johnson star and there is a good supporting performance by Eileen Heckart as Miss Wyman's friend.

Sword Without a Country (x), on 2 at midnight. A 1965

English-dubbed Italian-made costume adventure.

Wheeler and Murdoch, on 6 and 8 at midnight. No rating available on this 1972 TV pilot film about a veteran private eye and his young partner trying to solve a mysterious murder-robbery. Jack Warden and Christopher Stone star in the title roles and supporting cast includes Van Johnson and Diane Baker.

Day at Night, on 9 at 10:30

— James Day talks with Norman Lear, producer of several successful TV series (including All in the Family, Maude and Sanford and Son). Topics include the roles he has created, the people who have inspired them and developing a female character. (30 mins.)

Today's Highlights

Not For Women Only, on 4 at 9:30 — Part 2 of Barbara Walters report on how to buy art, with her guests Richard Feigen of the Feigen Gallery in New York and art authority Huntington Hartford. (30 mins.)

Merv Griffin, on 4 at 10 — Guest host comedian Sheeky Greene welcomes Che Atkins, pop singer Freda Payne and Mr. Universe Arnold Schwarzenegger. (90 mins.)

Mike Douglas, on 7 at 6:30 — The co-host for this program is child-commercial star Mason Reese and guests include his parents, actress Polly Bergen and Peter Lupus (Mission Impossible). (60 mins.)

The Seattle Metro Story, on 9 at 6:30 — A report on the citizen-initiated metropolitan authority project that terminated environmental pollution of Lake Washington. (30 mins.)

Evening at Pops, on 9 at 7 — Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops performs the music of George Gershwin with guest pianist Earl Wild, who plays Gershwin's Concerto in F. (60 mins.)

Man Builds, Man Destroys, on 9 at 8 — A report on worldwide efforts to bring more efficient mass transit to cities. Highlights include a look at Aerotrain, which has been designed to travel on a cushion of air at speeds exceeding 180 miles an hour. (30 mins.)

Eye to Eye, on 9 at 8:30 — Tonight's program looks at the themes explored by artists during the Middle Ages, with host Stephen Koch. (30 mins.)

Jeanne Wolf With .... on 9 at 9 — Hostess Ms. Wolf talks to Don Shula, who has coached the Miami Dolphins to two consecutive National Football League championships. Subjects range from Shula's family life to his views on the World Football League. (30 mins.)

Performance, on 9 at 9:30 — A recital by the Baltimore Camerata, featuring an unusual combination of instruments — flute, cello and harp. (30 mins.)

Great Mysteries, on 12 at 9:30 — Orson Welles introduces O'Henry's The Furniture Room, starring Clarence Williams as a young man in search of his lost love. (30 mins.)

Police Story, on 5 at 10 — Conclusion of a two-part episode about an underworld family sworn to kill a member of the special surveillance squad. Vic Morrow stars with Tige Andrews, Anjanette Comer and Ray Danton. (60 mins.)

ROD STEIGER
... on 11 at 8 p.m.

MARGARET RUTHERFORD

ABC-TV Documentaries Now on Prestige Map

By JOHN O'CONNOR

Emerging from the inevitable rhetoric of promises, ABC News Close-Up has worked. The series of monthly news specials will complete its first year in September with a look at television and the question of how and why certain programs ever make it to the small screens throughout the land.

It all began last October with Life Liberty and the Pursuit of Coal, a Stephen Fleischman documentary on the economic and power policies of the coal industry in West Virginia. Certain coal companies were discovered to be operating "often with a cavalier disregard for the law." The offending companies, their executives and their defenders in Washington were identified clearly. An impressive blow was delivered to the lofty vagueness that is used as a shell for too many TV documentaries.

At the time, ABC and Av Westin were insisting that the new series would be thoroughly investigative while remaining carefully within the parameters of fairness and balance. Mr. Westin is actually the executive producer of the series but does not receive on-screen credit because his company title of "News Vice President and Director of Television Documentaries" supposedly puts him above such mundane considerations.

In a conversation before the series started, Mr. Westin insisted that the network was giving him unusual freedom. Although ABC had been producing prime-time documentaries, some of them quite good, the scheduling was sporadic and the format lacked the eye-catching cohesiveness of a CBS Reports or "NBC White Paper." Mr. Westin had brought the nightly edition of ABC News into national prominence and intra-network competition with Harry Reasoner and Howard K. Smith. He was the obvious choice for a major effort to put ABC documentaries on the prestige map.

He has. The Close-Up series has been startlingly solid in investigative reporting. A study of fire hazards, produced by Pamela Hill, was specific enough to have a manufacturer of cribs go to the trouble of getting a temporary injunction against the program's being shown in Indiana. James Benjamin's Food—Green Grow the Profits questioned some practices of the giant "agribusiness" to provocative and devastating effect.

Among the other and better programs: The Right to Die produced by Marlene Sanders, exploring the questions of when should death come and who should decide; Oil—The Policy Crisis, produced by Mr. Fleischman, an examination of oil-policy history and practices, explicit enough to incur the widely publicized but unavailing wrath of major oil companies; and Martin Carr's Culture Thieves, an investigation of the "plundered past," a detailed examination of the international illicit trade in antiquities.

The Close-Up series has not been without flaws. The otherwise-first rate "Paper Prison" was marred by the inclusion of a scene showing ABC cameras gaining access to supposedly confidential material. But the implication could have been merely that the custodian of the material placed too much trust in ABC newsmen. The result was presented as a coup, which was perhaps but not necessarily so.

Women in Prison tackled the prickly object of prison reforms, but gave the impression that it was less interested in investigating than in propounding the particular views of the producer. Opponents of that view were merely tolerated. Pamela Hill's most recent effort, Children: A Case of Neglect, suffered from a lack of balance between good film making and good journalism. The slew of close-ups of children in distress got in the way, temporarily but annoyingly, of the more distressing facts about those children.

Mr. Westin is pleased, deservedly so, with the results. He has created a first-rate staff. In addition to the producers mentioned, the series also claims Paul Altmyer and Phil Lewis. And the reporting staff is good, superbly paced by the tough, no-nonsense style of Brit Hume, formerly of Jack Anderson's investigative staff.

But Mr. Westin doesn't hesitate to pinpoint his biggest pleasure: "The corporate side has stood with us." Investigative journalism generates controversy. That is no secret. The test of a company is in how far it is willing to withstand the pressures of that controversy. So far, ABC has demonstrated a perhaps surprising — and fairly shrewd — commitment.

This has given the Westin operation an invaluable credibility within the company, opening the news door for other projects. One is an "action biography" series, recently launched with a portrait of Secretary of State Kissinger. Subjects on tap include Vice President Ford and President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt.

On August 16, Close-Up will offer an hour-long study of inflation. It might be effective. It might not. That's the game of TV documentaries. One thing, though, is certain. As a series, taken as a whole, Close-Up has made its special mark. There's a new game in town, and all of the players will be forced to become a little bit sharper. That works to the benefit of everyone, on either side of the camera.

New York Times

ABC-TV NEWS correspondent Ann Medina balances stacks of money (from the vault of Manufacturers Hanover Trust in New York) to illustrate the erosion of the wage earner's dollar for the documentary special, ABC News Close-up on Inflation, to be telecast on Friday at 10 p.m. on Channel 4. The program investigates the causes and alternatives to inflation.

DON SHULA, head coach of the Miami Dolphins, discusses his personal and professional life with producer-host Jeanne Wolf on her interview series, Jeanne Wolf With . . . to be telecast on Tuesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 9.

Born Free Becomes a TV Series

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

Sooner or later someone was bound to make a television series out of Born Free. The series will arrive in September, leading off prime time on Monday nights for NBC-TV, and by most forecasts it will have a short life. Born Free is being scheduled against the long-running Gunsmoke (CBS) and The Rookies (ABC), which is starting to run down.

Born Free began as a best-selling book by Joy Adamson, an account of a game warden in northern Kenya and his wife, Virginia McKenna, in the leading roles. The film did quite well at the box office, was rated one of the 10 best pictures of the year by Film Daily and won Academy Awards for the best musical scoring and for the song Born Free.

That film had three network TV runs, with its rating starting at 34.2, dropping to 23.4 and, finally, to 18.0.

That wasn't the end of the saga, either. A sequel, The Lions Are Free, was released in 1969, again starring Travers and Ms. McKenna. It was the story of preparing and rehabilitating the tame lions to live in the wilds. Its splash wasn't as great, but it was televised three times: on NBC (rating of 25.4) and twice on CBS (26.4 and 19.3).

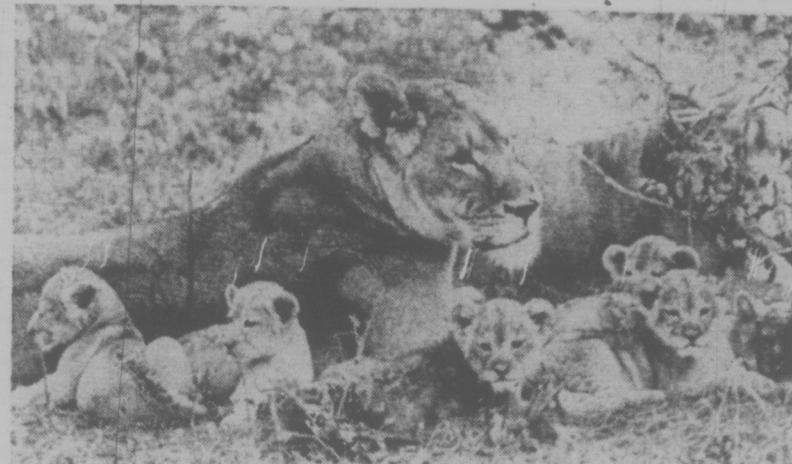

Even that wasn't the end of the story.

During Jack Paar's travels in Africa, he heard sad stories about the plight of the lions from Born Free. Jack generously offered to bring them to the United States for a permanent home in a wild animal preserve in Florida.

This was the subject for a television special, which, unfortunately, turned out to be rather dull and Jack learned — too late — that the lions he imported really had no connection with the lions of Born Free. Good try. Poor information.

Even that wasn't the end of the story.

Last spring NBC announced that — sight unseen — it would carry a TV series based on The Lions Are Free.

Gary Collins was cast in the role that Bill Travers had played, and Diana Muldaur was cast as the wife. They went off to Kenya, where most of the filming is to be done.

Almost no animal has been safe from the men who make filmed series for TV. The lions of Born Free are reasonably close relatives of Clarence, the cross-eyed lion of Daktari.

Perhaps the biggest of all TV stars was Mayá, an elephant in a series that starred Jay North. It was filmed in India by the King Brothers but had a brief run.

Flipper, a dolphin, had a waterlogged series, and Gentle Ben, a bear, lasted through three TV seasons.

Peter Graves made a lot of money from Mission: Impossible, but he got his start mainly as the supporting player for a horse in a series called Fury. It ran for six seasons, much better than the two seasons allowed My Friend Flicka or the one season permitted National Velvet.

All of which looks like a losing TV series for Born Free. That, finally, ought to be the end of the saga of Elsa the lioness and her three cubs.

Washington Post

A PENCHANT FOR PUBLICITY — Dale Robertson stars as the flamboyant 1933 Midwest FBI Bureau Chief, Melvin Purvis, in Melvin Purvis, G-Man, the ABC Wednesday Movie of the Week to be telecast on Channel 4 at 8:30 p.m. The film focuses on Purvis' relentless pursuit of the infamous gangster Machine Gun Kelly.

Movies

Moss Rose (XXX), on 13 at noon — A slow moving but well-played Victorian mystery drama about a blackmailing chorus girl and an aristocratic family involved in murder, filmed in 1947 and starring Ethel Barrymore, Peggy Cummins and Victor Mature.

A Howling in the Woods (XX), on 6 and 8 at 12:15 — A 1971 made-for-TV suspense thriller about a series in mysteries in a troubled town, starring Barbara Eden, Vera Miles and Larry Hagman.

Racing Blood (X), on 11 at 1 — Routine 1934 horse racing drama for the youngsters.

Escape from East Berlin (XXX), on 5 at 3:30 — Based on a true story, this 1962 drama about refugees planning an escape tunnel to the western sector of Berlin manages to generate a good deal of suspense, thanks to an excellent screenplay by Don Muriay, Werner Klemperer and Christine Kaufmann.

Here Come the Nelsons (XX), on 7 at 8:30 — A pleasant 1952 comedy about the domestic adventures of the then-radio team of Ozzie and Harriet Nelson. Supporting cast includes their son David Nelson and Rock Hudson.

A Bell for Adano (XXX), on 13 at 8 — John Hodiak, Gene Tierney and William Bendix star in this excellent 1947 film adaptation of John Hersey's novel about the American occupation of a small Italian town after the Second World War. The character sketches are believe and the simplicity of the subject is sensitively handled.

Alfred the Great, on 7 at 9 — No rating available on this 1969 English-made drama about the would-be priest who became king and put an end to Danish conquests in 9th-century Britain. An excellent cast includes David Hemmings (Blowup) in the title role, with Michael York, Colon Blakely, Alan Dobie, Vivien Merchant, and Peter Vaughan.

Love with the Proper Stranger (XXX), on 12 at 9 — Excellent performances by Natalie Wood and Steve McQueen place this 1963 film, about a pregnant unwed girl and her irresponsible musician-boyfriend, a notch or two above average. It's a contemporary love story set in New York City, and the on-location scenes add greatly to the film's appeal.

The Story of Mankind (X), on 12 at 11:30 — A star-studded cast is the only interest in this ridiculous excursion through the pages of history, based on the novel by Hendrik Van Loon. Filmed in 1957, it's a poor mixture of comedy and drama with segments ranging from Groucho Marx as Phog Minuit, Dennis

WALTER PIDGEON

Hopper as Napoleon to Hedy Lamarr as an unbelievable Joan of Arc. Others in the cast include Agnes Moorehead, Peter Lorre, Vincent Price, John Carradine, the Marx Brothers, Ronald Colman and Charles Coburn.

The Glass House (XXX), on 7 at 11:45 — Truman Capote (In Cold Blood) wrote this hard-hitting prison drama about a schoolteacher serving a one-year sentence for manslaughter. Filmed in the Utah State Prison, this 1972 drama features performances by real guards and inmates, backed by a competent professional cast that includes Alan Alda, Vic Morrow, Dean Jagger, Billy Dee Williams and Clu Gulager.

The Curse of the Werewolf (XX), on 2 at midnight — Horror fans will enjoy this well-produced Gothic thriller, filmed in England in 1961 and starring Oliver Reed.

How Green Was My Valley (XXXX), on 6 and 8 at 3:30 — An Oscar-winning 1941 film rendering of Richard Llewellyn's best-selling novel that offers a moving study of a coal mining family in Wales. It's beautiful and poignant, with flawless performances from a fine cast that includes Walter Pidgeon, Donald Crisp, Maureen O'Hara, Barry Fitzgerald and Roddy McDowall. Recommended.

Love Has Many Faces (XX), on 6 and 8 at 1:30 — Peyton Place comes to Mexico in this 1965 soap opera about wealthy women and predatory beach boys in Acapulco, starring Lana Turner, Cliff Robertson, Hugh O'Brian and Stephanie Powers.

Today's Highlights

Mike Douglas Show, on 12 at 3. Don Rickles is Mike's co-host today and together they welcome guests Barbi Benton, fifties singing group The Platters and actress Sylvia Miles. (60 mins.)

National Geographic, on 8 at 7. The Violent Earth, spectacular views of active volcanoes highlights this documentary expedition led by Dr. Haroun Tazieff, a prominent authority on volcanology. The most awesome film footage date from 1971, when Italy's Mt. Etna hurled some 15 million tons of lava down its slopes. At Etna's lip, Dr. Tazieff walks on lava crust as hot as 750 degrees, collecting gas samples that may help predict future eruptions. (90 mins.)

Quebec in Transition, on 12 at 7. Two reports: 1. Living French, an examination of Quebec's move toward cultural sovereignty; and 2. The Other Million, studies the hopes and fears of Quebec's non-French speaking citizens. (60 mins.)

This Land, on 2 and 6 at 4. An examination of the effects of the recent influx of backpacking hikers on the ecology of the Canadian Rockies. (30 mins.)

Evening at Pops, on 9 at 8. Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops perform the music of George Gershwin, with guest performer pianist Earl Wild playing Gershwin's Concerto in F. (60 mins.)

Just for Laughs, on 4 at 8:30. A comedy pilot, Ann in Blue, starring Penny Fuller as the head of a four-woman police units. (30 mins.)

International Performance, on 9 at 9. French television filmed this concert of Tchaikovsky and Wagner, highlighted by soloist Martha Argerich performing Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1. (60 mins.)

To See Ourselves, on 2 at 9:30. Repeat episodes of a popular CBC drama series, Tonight, Miracle at Indian River, a comedy about an overzealous clergyman on a campaign to promote marriage and high morals among his parishioners. (30 mins.)

Closing Down the Prisons, on 4 at 10. A special report examining the promises and risks involved in the impending decision in the State of Washington to phase out fortress-like prisons. Plans for moving the prisons into the community are explored — minimum supervision, halfway houses, work-training centres and maximum-security facilities — with alternatives even to these measures surveyed. (60 mins.)

Comedyworld, on 5 at 10. Highlight of tonight's hour of comedy are film clips from Mame (1974) and Harold Lloyd's Movie Crazy (1932). This is the last show of the series. (60 mins.)

How Could I Not Be Among You?, on 9 at 10. A documentary special on Ted Rosenthal, a poet at age 30, who faced the knowledge that he would soon die. Rosenthal reads selections from his work in this program filmed in 1971, some six months before his death from leukemia. (60 mins.)

cast in the CBC-TV's To See Ourselves series, on Thursday at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 2. This comedy-drama has been adapted for television from a story by Alden Nowlan.

PENNY FULLER stars as Sgt. Ann Neal in Ann in Blue, a TV pilot featured in the ABC comedy series, Just for Laughs, to be telecast on Thursday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 4.

PBS Repeats Cooke's 'America' Series

ALISTAIR COOKE
... prolific career

One of the best known historians of America is an Englishman — Alistair Cooke, born November 20, 1908 in Manchester, England.

Beginning this fall, Cooke will host his highly-acclaimed series America over the Public Broadcasting Service Tuesday, September 17 at 8:00 p.m. on KCTS 9.

America appeals to the general viewing audience, but it is also quite appealing as an educational series because of its historical value. For this reason KCTS 9's Education Department has included the series in its instructional schedule for use by teachers in the 50 school districts who are members of KCTS 9's in-school services. This daytime repeat telecast will be Wednesdays at 9:00 a.m.

When Cooke first visited the United States he planned to stay only briefly. A scholar of Jesus College, Cambridge, he came to the U.S. in 1932 to do graduate work at Yale and Harvard, with the intention of becoming a theatre director.

After pursuing that course for a year, however, Cooke recalled, "I discovered that the American landscape, its society and its politics, were far more dramatic than Broadway."

During a three-year return to England, he was a film critic for the British Broadcasting Corporation, a writer-

Since 1948 Cooke has been chief American correspondent for the British newspaper the Guardian (formerly the Manchester Guardian), and his popular Letters from America, a weekly radio broadcast to the English speaking world, is in its 28th year.

Cooke, who is married to the former Jane White Hawkes, a painter, has numerous interests, among which are jazz and golf. He is a gifted pianist, especially in jazz, and has recorded an album called An Evening with Alistair Cooke at the Piano.

Among his books are: A Generation on Trial: U.S.A. vs. Alger Hiss; a study of the elder Douglas Fairbanks; and two volumes of his radio talks, One Man's America, and Talk About America. He has edited two anthologies, Garbo and the Night Watchman and The Vintage Mencken. His most recent literary contribution is Alistair Cooke's America, based on the series. Cooke has been rewarded on both sides of the ocean for his achievements. He has received numerous Emmys, and a Peabody Award. Most recently, Queen Elizabeth II made him an honorary Knight Commander of the British Empire to honor "his outstanding contribution over many years to Anglo-American mutual understanding."

crater of Nyirangongo Volcano, in this scene from The Violent Earth, a National Geographic special to be telecast on Thursday at 7 p.m. on Channel 8.

Movies

Riot in Cell Block 11 (xxx), on 11 at 13 at noon. If hard-hitting prison dramas interest you, then you will enjoy this exciting and well-played 1954 story of a rebellious inmate who investigates a riot to cover his plans for escape. Neville Brand seems the perfect type to play a con, and is excellent in the role.

A Dangerous Age (xx), on 11 at 1. A 1957 Canadian-made feature about two young people in love trying to elope to the U.S. because of parental disapproval. Cast includes Kate Reid with Ben Piazza and Anne Pearson as the lovers.

The Gay Lady (xxx), on 5 at 8:30. A pleasant, well-acted 1949 musical about a turn-of-the-century music hall entertainer who marries into nobility, starring Jean Kent and James Donald.

Charlie Bubbles (xxxx), on 7 at 3:30. Albert Finney directed and stars in this excellent 1968 British-made study of a young man of modest circumstances who is catapulted out of his station and into fame, fortune, and an excessive boredom he simply cannot bear. The emptiness of his life is beautifully reflected in scenes of his electronically gadget-filled house, making robots of everyone within. An excellent supporting cast includes English actress Billie Whitelaw and Liza Minnelli.

Duel in the Jungle (x), on 11 at 8. A silly 1954 jungle adventure that has a bunch of good-looking actors (Dana Andrews, Jeanne Crain and David Farrar) standing around looking silly.

Deadwood '76 (x), on 13 at 8. Arch Hall Jr. stars in this shoddy 1964 western about a Civil War veteran who is mistreated by Billy the Kid.

Beg, Borrow or Steal, on 8 at 8:30. A 1972 made-for-TV crime-drama starring Mike Connors (Mannix), Michael Cole (Mod Squad) and Kent McCord (Adam-12) as three handicapped men who attempt a museum robbery. It's hard to imagine these TV crime-stoppers as crooks.

Number One (x), on 5 at 9. An embarrassingly bad 1969

Preminger directed this powerful and then (1955) controversial drama about a narcotics addict and his efforts to kick the habit. Frank Sinatra is excellent in the title role and he receives solid support from Kim Novak, Eleanor Parker and Darren McGavin.

The Demi Paradise (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. The Olivier genius shines through in this otherwise insignificant little 1943 British-made propaganda film, starring Sir Laurence as a gentle Russian engineer (when the Russians were our friends) visiting London in 1939.

Temple of a Thousand Lights (x), on 2 at midnight. A 1964 Italian-made adventure about the search for a priceless diamond.

The Birds (xx), on 7 at mid- night. The Hitchcock touch fizzles in this 1963 thriller about the bird-world turning on humans, creating terror and death. The characters both human and birdlike are unsympathetic and performances of Tippi Hedren, Rod Taylor and Suzanne Pleshette are wooden.

Ritual of Evil (xxx), on 8 at midnight. An entertaining 1970 TV-mystery starring Louis Jourdan as a psychiatrist interested in the bizarre world of the occult. A young heiress' death brings about Jourdan's investigation of the events leading to the tragedy. A good supporting cast (Anne Baxter, Diana Hyland and Wilfrid Hyde-White) keeps the interest high.

The Astounding She-Monster (x), on 7 at 1:30. Don't bother staying up for this silly 1957 thriller about an Amazonian-proportioned female who casts off poisonous radiation.

The Taming of the Shrew (xxxx), on 8 at 2:05. Do, however, stay up for this lavish Franco Zeffirelli production of the Shakespeare classic, with Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton in top form, filmed in 1965.

Today's Highlights

Mike Douglas Show, on 7 at 6:30. Mike and his co-host Alan Alda welcome Gary Burghoff (Radar in M-A-S-H), actress Diane Keaton and ex-world champion boxer Rocky Graziano. (60 mins.)

Challenging Sea, on 8 at 7. A look at the rescue operations of the U.S. Coast Guard. (30 mins.)

All in the Family, on 6 at 8. A repeat of the episode that has Archie learning an ego-deflating lesson because of his ignorant and patronizing attitude toward a retarded young man Gloria has befriended. (20 mins.)

Chicago . . . Meanwhile Back at the Ranch, on 4 at 8:30. In concert with pop-rock band Chicago, and the guests Anne Murray and Charlie Rich. (60 mins.)
